

Agreement reached on Everett Avenue deed

by Arlene Surprenant
Agreement has finally been reached between the town of Wilmington and the Wilmington Community Development Corporation (WCDC) with regards to turning over a deed for a 10,000 square foot parcel of land on Everett Avenue.

Accord came Monday following prolonged attempts by both sides to protect their interests in the transaction. The town will now move forward to turn over the deed to the non-profit corporation in return for an affordable home to be built by students in the home-building program at the Shawsheen Tech. The WCDC will handle the financing on the project and will sell the home back to the town once it's complete.

According to selectman Jim Stewart, who met with WCDC members and the town manager Monday, the terms of the agreement are favorable to both sides. Stewart said the WCDC will obtain a mortgage for up to $80,000 from a private source and the town will hold a second mortgage for up to $15,000, in case more funds are needed once the $80,000 is spent. If the additional funds are necessary, the board of selectmen can either release the $15,000 or pick up the first mortgage to finish the house, said Stewart.

"We are very confident, at this point, that the town won't enter the picture," Stewart told the Town Crier, adding that the $80,000 "restriction" was built into the agreement to assure the that the town would get an affordable home. He said the agreed on approach seemed the easiest way to insure affordability without placing undue restrictions on the WCDC.

Bob DiPalma, president of the WCDC, said he too was pleased with the final document.

"That agreement will give the town protection to guarantee the project will be finished and give us enough money to complete the job. It's a good agreement all around," said DiPalma. He also noted he has been getting "good cooperation" from town agencies and favorable feedback on the project from citizens in the town.

Because a few weeks were lost trying to iron out differences, the WCDC will now have to move fast to meet the tight schedule of the Tech. DiPalma assured school officials his group will "work very hard to make up the deficit in time."

The agreement is expected to be signed by selectmen tonight (Wednesday) and by WCDC members shortly after. The next steps, according to DiPalma, will be to obtain a mortgage, set up accounts for building materials for the Tech, obtain permits, arrange for water and sewer to be brought to the site, draw up a preliminary plan, and build a foundation by September.

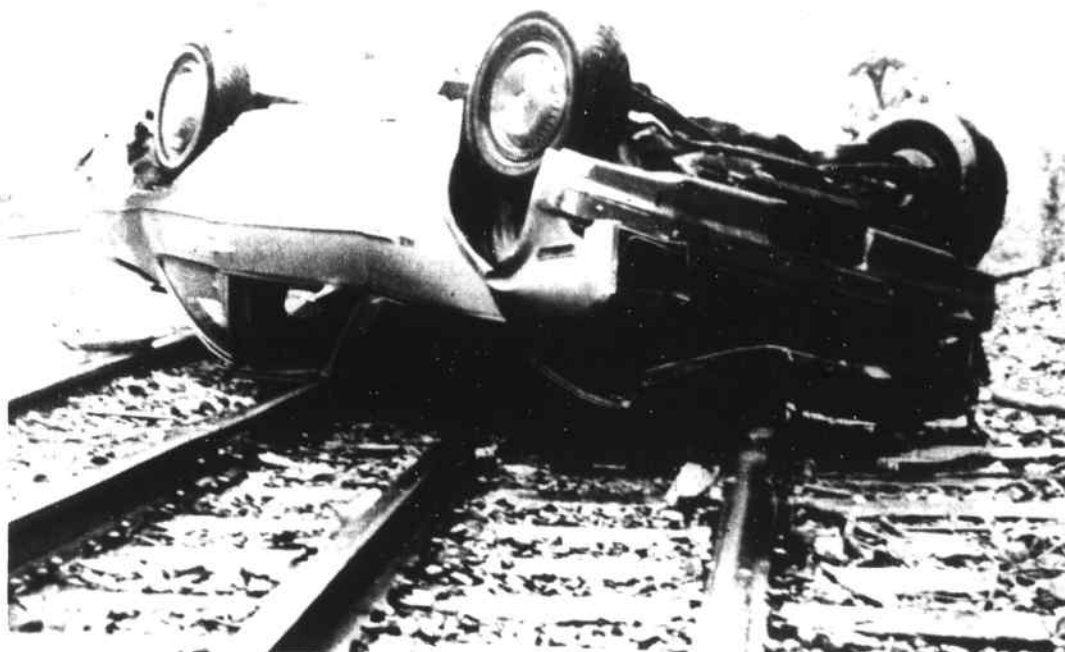

DiPalma told this paper the home will probably be a split ranch type with a four foot cellar instead of a full cellar because of the high water table.

In answer to concerns about having a clear title to the town-owned site, Stewart said he was assured by town counsel the land has "a marketable title."

"I am looking forward to finally having a house built for the town. I hope it goes smoothly," Stewart said.

DiPalma stated WCDC is looking toward the future and hoping to develop other town-owned land or land donated by private citizens to meet the need for affordable housing in Wilmington.

"We plan to actively pursue any buildable lots that come to our attention," DiPalma said.

Rough landing

A Chevy Nova landed on the railroad tracks in Wilmington Center last Wednesday evening after it fell 27.4 feet from the Burlington Avenue bridge. The driver, Margaret T. Haverly, 18, of Fairview Ave., Wilmington escaped with minor injuries. The car was totaled, and was pulled from the tracks by Fred Cain's wrecker. (Photo by Dave Fitzgerald)

Woman escapes serious injury in "lucky" accident

If there's such a thing as a lucky accident, it happened in Wilmington Center last Wednesday evening. Margaret Haverly of Fairview Avenue, Wilmington, had a harrowing experience, but it could have been much worse.

The accident occurred just after 7 p.m. as the 18-year-old girl was making a left turn onto Burlington Avenue. As she approached the old railroad bridge, another car came over the bridge, and she braked to avoid it. There had been a heavy rainstorm, and her car skidded on the wet pavement.

The car went to the right of the bridge superstructure, and through a railing at the top of an old wooden stairway, just missing a gas main. A witness to the accident told a firefighter on the scene that the car teetered, and then fell to the railroad tracks, with the driver screaming.

The car landed on its roof on the tracks, near a train which was in the depot discharging passengers. Had the accident occurred a minute or two earlier, the car could have collided with the train.

When emergency personnel arrived on the scene, gasoline was pouring out of the tank, and the driver was still in the car. Firefighters were able to open the driver's door of the car, and remove Haverly on a backboard. Meanwhile, the gasoline was washed down.

Haverly was taken to Choate Hospital in Woburn for treatment of minor injuries to the face and legs. She was released on Friday.

The bridge has been the scene of accidents in the past. A couple of years ago, there were two accidents in which cars flipped and landed on the bridge, after riding up the girder.

The bridge, built about the turn of the century, for many years has been the focus of proposals for its replacement.

Libby to leave conservation post

Wilmington's conservation administrator is leaving the employ of the town. Elizabeth "Libby" Sabounjian will accept a position with the Mass. Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Basically, she will be doing similar work, except on a state level instead of a town level. Her title will be that of a senior aquatic biologist, assigned to Wetlands and Waterways, working out of the Northeast Regional Office in Woburn.

In her job in Wilmington, she was reviewing and writing orders on cases involving building on wetlands. At the DEQE, she will be dealing with cases which have been appealed from local conservation commissions, reviewing and drafting superceding orders.

While she was very happy with her town job, she said, she took the new job for three reasons. Money, a new ladder to climb, and to expand her opportunity to deal with new challenges. August 4 will be her last day at the Town Hall.

She had occupied the job of conservation administrator for two and a half years, the first person to hold the position. She said she walked into a situation where conservation commission members were having philosophical differences over her position. A key question was who would hire the administrator -- the commission or the town manager.

Sabounjian said she just tried to do her job and see that the philosophical differences remained generic.

Her tenure saw the commission secretary fired, followed a year later by the firing of the chairman. That resulted in a mass resignation by some members of the commission.

In the year since that resignation, the commission has yet to seat a full board. But Sabounjian credits the members with having very professional attitudes.

"They generally want to see development balanced with environmental protection," she said.

"I have no influence on how these individuals think," she said. They, sometimes vote - how I wouldn't vote -- but that's fine."

She said that during her time on the job, she received no attempts at undue influence from either the selectmen or the town manager. She said she did receive excellent cooperation from her co-workers in the Town Hall.

Scheduling changes approved for kindergarten classes

by Arlene Surprenant
Kindergarten parents in Wilmington will be facing some changes when school reopens in the fall, after a four-to-two vote of the school committee.

At their last meeting, committee members went along with a request from kindergarten teachers to delay the September opening date and reinstate Wednesday afternoon release time. In the fall, kindergarten students will begin school the first Monday after the Wednesday opening in order to become better oriented to the classroom and bus routes. They will also go home early each Wednesday to give teachers a continuous block of preparation time which is currently lacking in their schedules.

Several teachers in the elementary schools complained at the last school board meeting that there were too many interruptions in their day with specialists taking the students out for art, music, and library. They said they would have a less fragmented day if the half hours set aside for these subject were deleted and art, music, and library were incorporated into the developmental curriculum taught by themselves. This was approved by the school committee.

During discussion of the changes, Supt. William Fay proposed that the revised kindergarten program become a pilot program for next year. He suggested the teachers report back to the committee in the spring and let members know just how effective the changes are.

James Demos said the parents should be kept informed of any changes since it was possible the revisions may interfere with a parent's workday. The teachers said they plan to notify parents as soon as possible. A motion to accept Fay's recommendation was approved by a majority of the board.

Health board washes hands of well dispute

by Arlene Surprenant

The Wilmington Board of Health washed its hands Monday of a problem centering on three lots on Wirth Avenue, off Congress Street, telling both sides to settle the issue between themselves.

Developer Mark Nelson, who owns two of the lots, put in wells on the corner of each lot to avoid the cost of bringing in a water line at his own expense. One of those wells was found to be in violation of Title V regulations because it is too close to deep holes drilled for a septic system on the neighboring lot.

The board of health had approved Nelson's first septic plan showing water lines. Members denied a second plan two weeks ago because the plan now showed wells on the property, one of which was too close to the test holes.

Francis Linehan, who holds the power of attorney for his mother on the adjoining lot, claimed Monday there was also a leeching field within 100 feet of the well. He told the board he had not been approached on the issue and he felt he was being "deprived of my rights."

There seemed to be some confusion over the ownership of the adjoining lot. While Linehan said his mother owns it, the applicant for the deep hole tests is reportedly Steve Bresnick. Nelson said he approached a Mr. Spinelli in March to inform him of the decision to drill the wells and their location. According to Linehan, Spinelli only rents the property.

Health board members seemed to feel there was wrong on both sides and their board was being used to act as arbitrator in a personal dispute.

"We're being thrust into the middle here and I don't like it," said Chairman Jim Ficociello.

Nelson claimed that from the beginning he had been "upfront." He said he had approached his neighbors about sharing the cost of the water line after he had brought a road into the property at his own expense. Nelson said the neighbors didn't want to contribute to the cost since they felt he would have to bring in a water line anyway. Though Nelson admitted he dug the wells without going to the board of health first, he said he did get permission from the conservation commission and he did drill the wells before the test holes were dug.

"The logical thing was everyone should work together," Nelson told this paper.

Health Director Greg Erickson, who witnessed the digging of the test holes on the adjacent property, said Nelson's major fault was not coming to the board before drilling the wells. He said the well in question is only 40 feet from the closest deep hole and is "encroaching on that percolation test."

Ficociello said he felt both Nelson's and Linehan's lots are now unbuildable. He reminded Nelson that his plan has been denied. He told Linehan that he hasn't shown any septic plans to the board. The chairman said if the board is forced to arbitrate the issue, it would most likely make a decision that would not be acceptable to either side.

It was suggested both men look at such options as moving the well, exploring another location for the abutting septic system, or using town water. Ficociello told Nelson to resubmit his application and attempt to resolve the problem with his neighbors within 45 days. If a mutual decision is reached, said Ficociello, the board could grant the necessary permits. If the issue remains unresolved, he added, a hearing would be held with abutters present to rehash the problem.

Supplemental impact report filed with state

by Arlene Surprenant

A supplemental environmental impact report (FEIR) for Shawheen River Estates has been filed with the state according to project proponent Jay Tighe. Environmental Secretary John DeVillars had required the supplemental report to address concerns raised by MEPA (Massachusetts Environmental Protection Act).

In an update on the controversial 220 unit housing project, Tighe told the Wilmington Planning Board Tuesday "We're pretty sure we've addressed everything."

Included in the latest report is the project's final plan which Tighe said is "hardly" any different from earlier, less detailed plans. The plan shows, among other things, the location of a pump station and lookout tower, single family units along abutters' property "to appease the neighbors," a four foot high landscaping berm, and two cul de sacs in Reed Street and Chisholm Roadway to slow vehicles but not stop cut-thru traffic. Tighe said he had "addressed" a request by the state to move a greenbelt area closer to abutting properties by leaving it in the middle of the site.

Project proponents have changed plans to bring a sewer line across an easement off Hopkins Street, primarily to avoid filling more wetlands. Tighe said the sewer line would now be brought along Shawheen Avenue to the Shawheen School athletic field along the tree line and into the project.

Town Manager Buzz Stupczynski said earlier in the day he is allowing Tighe to cut across the field but, since he hadn't seen any plans, he was unsure if the sewer would be brought in from Hopkins or Shawheen. Some school officials told the Town Crier they weren't notified of the change in plans which would impact the school.

Stupczynski said Tighe and state officials met two weeks ago to review proposed changes to the FEIR. He said he was present at the meeting primarily to assure the state the town still backs the project, despite recent concerns over adequate fire protection and on-going concerns with access, density, traffic, and impact on several abutting neighborhoods.

According to Tighe, concerned residents have 30 days to comment on the supplemental FEIR once the ad is placed in environmental newspapers. Tighe said he expects the ad to appear this week. Once the 30 day period is up, MEPA will have 10 days to issue a decision. That decision is expected on or about August 22.

Stearns named as planning director

The Town of Wilmington will have its first planning director on staff as of August 1. Janet Stearns, currently the planning director for the Town of Scituate, accepted the position earlier this week. While in Scituate, Ms. Stearns served as the town's first professional planner and was actively involved in working with the planning board on an update of the master plan.

Prior experience of Ms. Stearns includes seven years of work in various planning positions at the municipal and regional levels. She holds a B.S. and a masters degree in public policy from Purdue University. Janet was recently elected to the office of secretary/treasurer with the Massachusetts Association of planning directors and will serve in this capacity over the next year. Her new responsibilities in Wilmington will include working on long range planning issues and providing staff support to the planning board.

WHAT AN EXECUTOR DOES

You may hear of lawyers or bank trustees serving as executor of multi-million dollar estates, but, in most cases, all that a person need bring to the position is good sense, patience with details, and a prudent way with money.

It is the role of an executor to collect all the assets of the estate and preserve them while paying legitimate claims against the estate, and to distribute the remainder according to the provisions of the will. The job can be relatively straightforward where assets are easy to value and the will clearly determines who gets what. It gets difficult where assets are tangles and/or beneficiaries quarrel.

The executor is ultimately responsible for the estate, for paying its bills, its taxes, and its beneficiaries. It's usually wise to go slowly and make sure everything's paid before making distributions to the heirs. The estate will pay for professional help - lawyer, accountant, appraiser - where it is needed.

When executors come up against tax forms and balance sheets, they call on the knowhow people at Joyce K. Brisbois, C.P.A.

Store owner clarifies zoning issue

by Arlene Surprenant

A zoning issue brought up at a past meeting once again was hashed out at a meeting of the Wilmington Board of Health.

On Monday, Michael Castellano, owner of Uncle Mickys and the adjacent Food Mart store on Shawheen Avenue, paid a visit to the board to clarify the whole issue.

Building Inspector James Russo had asked the board to revoke Castellano's food permit because he wasn't in compliance with local zoning. Russo claimed a wall Castellano erected in his building was illegal since he didn't first check with the town and obtain a building permit.

Castellano told the board he had a "right" to run two businesses on site since he had permits for both a sub shop and retail store. The sub shop use is grandfathered in, he said. Castellano explained, too, he originally had a wall in place separating the pizza from the retail section but took it down for his customers' convenience. He said his only mistake was in failing to get permission from Russo to rebuild the wall, something he was currently in the process of doing.

Health Director Greg Erickson told the board this was not a sanitary issue but a zoning issue, despite the fact that there was some discussion of whether Castellano was running a restaurant or not.

Erickson felt the board should follow the lead of the building inspector since "we're not in a position to enforce zoning."

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

I've been aware for many years that truth and accurate information haven't always been prerequisites for columns, stories, etc. that appear in your paper.

In your June 28 edition a column by Kevin Sowyrda entitled "Politics and Patronage at Tewksbury State Hospital," your newspaper hit an all time journalistic low.

"Some people are suggesting Lawrence's downfall is attributed to State Rep. James Miceli." This statement is nonsensical and has no basis in fact. Superintendent Lawrence works for the Executive office of Human Services and not the Legislature.

"How can the state hospital function with growing political pressure both inside and outside the walls of the facility," the columnist further stated. Your columnist should be more specific - because if pressure was applied, it certainly was not from me.

"The climax came just last week as the news was broken, ironically enough by a local State Representative, that the Hospital's Chief would be leaving soon due to administration and managerial problems." Totally untrue. I was called out of an 8:00 A.M. meeting with Senator Patricia McGovern and the Tewksbury Board of Selectmen to answer a telephone call from Lowell Sun reporter Lisa Adams. Lisa informed me someone at the Hospital told her that Superintendent Lawrence had been fired the prior evening. I told her I doubted this, but I would call Boston and get back to her. Only after responding to her inquiry did we discuss Bob's pending resignation. Lisa Adams from The Lowell Sun would be more than willing to confirm this information.

Next quote: "All of this comes in light of increasing reports that Miceli has utilized Tewksbury State as a bastion for delving out favors. There is word from inside and outside the hospital that Miceli who pleaded Lawrence's appointment two years ago, quickly became disenchanted with the administrator who hailed from New York State because he would not play favoritism in the patients' admission process, for the benefit of Miceli's friends." Once again untrue. You're batting .000. Bob Lawrence would never say that nor would anyone affiliated with the process say that. There is a waiting list at the hospital, and admissions have been very few. Ask Stu

Neilson, who called a few of us relative to an admission he was interested in.

Now for a few of Rocco DePasquale's comments. "Miceli worked in the background last time to keep Aldo Cairra out." This statement by itself is so absurd, but that's a built-in hazard when you quote Rocco. Although I was not one of Aldo's supporters, Aldo was able to obtain the support of then Attorney General Frank Bellotti, Auditor Joe DeNucci, Representative Edward LaLachur, Representative Susan Rourke, Representative Michael Rea, and he may have even had Congressman Chester Atkins. Even the Speaker's office received a call on behalf of Aldo. What Rocco is trying to say is that I alone because of a close friendship with Phil Johnston was able to overcome the support Aldo had from all of these folks who also enjoy a friendship with our former colleague Phil Johnston. I had never met Bob Lawrence until Commissioner Walker brought him into my office and introduced him to me. I told the Commissioner that I would support and work with candidate Lawrence.

DePasquale - Quote #2 - regarding newspaper interview relative to Lawrence's departure. "He has practically destroyed the man's (Lawrence's) career. If that is how he treats people, people better start reassessing Jim Miceli for what he really is" said DePasquale. This has got to be one of the lowest and most crude comments I've ever seen in print. Rocco is frustrated because he's met another public official he can't control. And, Rock, I'll compare my record of working with and helping people with your's any time.

And now, as Paul Harvey says on his daily broadcasts, here is the rest of the story. Prior to the last Town Election on April 15, Kevin John Sowyrda approached me and said he wanted to discuss with me his potential candidacy for one of the seats on the Board of Selectmen. He also told Chet Bruce that if I supported him for one of the two seats, he would be supportive of me. I told Kevin at our meeting that I couldn't support him but didn't discourage him from running.

Mr. Editor, you and your newspaper lack integrity. You have allowed the same individual who failed to get my political support to pull off a weekly hatchet job in his column.

I don't usually respond to your inaccuracies, and I've promised myself not to do so too often; but I couldn't let this piece of trash stand without responding.

Sincerely,
James R. Miceli
State Representative

The week of the Fourth of July has always been a week of excitement in Wilmington. When the red, white, and blue trash barrels appear on the common, we can begin to sense the thrill and anxiety of hundreds of people uniting for our town's week celebration that comes only once a year.

Once the week of the fourth begins, the bright, glowing carnival arrives in the high school parking lot across from the common. Every kid in town experiences a rush of excitement, their heart beats faster, and adrenalin runs through their body, as they drive past the lights of the carnival. At night all the locals carry lawn chairs, blankets and coolers as they head toward that one spot of trampled grass in the center of town. There's always some sort of band on the common; usually playing old love songs or marches. Year pre-planned activities and events take place. There is always the famous dunking chair, the nightly organized sponsored dinners on long picnic tables.

Walking into the scene, the aroma of fried dough and grilled sausages and peppers fills the air. Screams from the life threatening rides (the sizzler, the tilt a whirl, and the infamous salt and pepper shakers) can be heard. Everyone you have lost touch with for the past year is lingering around somewhere in the midst of the crowd. People from out of town can be easily spotted; everyone knows everyone else, and everyone is sharing a common bond. The true spirit of Wilmington emerges as small hellos are exchanged and children are running, laughing and screaming. No matter who you are, if you live in Wilmington, and you walk within the crowd of people, you will feel a sense of belonging and are generously welcomed.

This year I was reluctant to go spend a night in the midst of the excitement. After all, I should have outgrown tilt a whirls and throwing darts at apples on a wall, by now. I was about to spend an evening at my friend's house to watch an intellectual movie. I got into my car, turned on the radio, (a Bruce Springsteen song, "Independence Day" was playing), and began to drive through Wilmington. The sun was on the verge of setting, but it shined a magnificent deep orange, and it produced a glare on my windshield. I passed groups of moving lawn chairs, blankets and coolers, all headed for that same spot of trampled grass in the center of town. Police were everywhere; directing traffic through the road blocked detours. In the distance I could faintly hear "My I have this Dance for the Rest of My Life?" playing on the common. My heart raced, I rolled down the window, checked my look in the rear view mirror, and became determined to change my friends' minds and to go the carnival after all. I called, and do you know what? They had already changed plans and were getting ready to drive down to the action in town. I raced home, teased my hair, put on some lip gloss and met my friends for an evening of fun with the town of Wilmington!!

It was the same. Nothing had changed. I saw the same people, the same rides, and even the same games. (This year, however, Batman was obviously the theme for prizes). My friends finally decided to be seen on a ride or two, so we chose the umbrellas. The man who ran the ride eyed and admired us, and when it was time for him to collect the tickets, he said, "Keep your tickets for this one, Babes." A free ride!!! Five years ago, I dreamed of getting a free ride. That meant an extra ticket for an extra ride! Today, that ticket was worth practically nothing to me, so I sat back on the sparkley seats and savored the ride. From the top I could see everything and everyone. I remembered past years; spending such nights with cousins, friends and even an ex-boyfriend who won me a Bruce Springsteen mirror. I glanced down at two kids kissing on the bleachers of the abandoned high school field down below. I watched a little girl cry because she wanted to go on more rides and her mother wouldn't let her. I felt a warm summer breeze, smelled the greasy air, heard the beat of drums in the background and for a split second everything seemed to stop. I closed my eyes and realized that "Fun on the Fourth" will always be associated with the feelings of youth, the spirit of friends and family, and the town of Wilmington all uniting to celebrate that special holiday that comes only once a year on the Fourth of July.

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

About a month ago I was wondering when the 'you know what' was going to finally hit the fan in the ongoing melodrama called Massachusetts state government. That finally happens Thursday as you pull this wonderful publication from your little red mailbox. Sometime around 11:00 in the morning, about the same time Bob Barker is pushing a dish washer on the Price is Right, Mike Dukakis, the King Lear of state politics, will announce drastic cuts in the Fiscal Year 1990 budget with potentially disastrous ramifications for local governments.

Dukakis is reportedly mulling additional cuts in state aid to cities and towns to the tune of $200 million. Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski told this writer that, "If $200 million is vetoed by the governor... then there will be the proverbial blood bath in the streets, and that means personnel cuts."

Local aid comprises a significant part of the town's budget, and municipalities are already living under the assumption of level funding of aid from the state. In turn, the Dukakis plan may leave cities and towns with no choice but to implement deep cuts in services.

At a meeting with the governor on Tuesday, Stapczynski, who is president of the Mass. Municipal Managers Association, said that estimates for the fiscal year 1990 shortfall go as high as $500 million. And though the Legislature seems poised to override any attempt by the governor to take a bigger bite out of local aid, Dukakis nonetheless has the executive authority to slash money intended for the municipalities.

Wilmington is threatened with more layoffs as the budget is already "lean". This is according to the town manager and members of the finance committee. "We struggled to get under the levy limit, and Bill Fay struggled even harder", said fincom Vice-Chairman Brad Jackson. Jackson confirmed Stapczynski's predictions of layoffs in the event of further local aid reductions saying, "The pink slips will fly, and I just wish Mike Dukakis had to sign them personally."

Stapczynski and Jackson said they could not specify what cuts may await the town budget until after the governor has presented his budget vetoes on Thursday.

Stapczynski warned that the present fiscal confusion will hinder the cities and towns in setting their tax rates for the next year. As to what is motivating Dukakis to assault local aid once again, the manager said that in previous years municipalities have been the greatest benefactors of the now deceased Massachusetts Miracle. "I think he wants to see the cities and towns hurt because of all the areas of state budget growth, local aid has been number one for the past eight years" said Stapczynski.

The political pundits are already calculating Dukakis' raid on local aid as simply a tactic to secure yet another tax hike from the Legislature. Picture for a moment municipal officials and unions pleading with the Legislature to restore precious aid to their cities and towns. Then, the governor freezes aid payments saying he doesn't have the cash until there is an increase in revenue. ("Revenue" is what your parents used to call taxes).

What all this may do is put the onus on the Legislature for withholding aid to local governments until additional monies are raised.

This guy Dukakis is a sneaky son-of-a-gun, isn't he? And meanwhile, referendum mania has begun again, rightfully so. While Barbara Anderson is collecting signatures to repeal the recent income tax hike, the Mass. Municipal Association may move to guarantee local aid distribution in the future. Arlington Town Manager Don Marque has proposed a ballot question requiring the state to give cities and towns 40 percent of the annual growth in state revenues.

Buzz Stapczynski will ask the Wilmington Board of Selectmen to endorse this proposal at their meeting on July 17.

Marque may have gotten the idea from Dukakis, who proposed it on the campaign trail eight years ago.

Post High School options - Part four

Doing nothing means going nowhere

by Bill Conlon

Well, high school graduate, so you've decided to take the summer off, eh? Hang around with your friends and see what turns up in the fall, if anything? Live off the fat of the land for a few months, maybe a few years? Oh, really?

Sorry, youngster. Graduation was in June, and here it is July. If you don't have a job now, or at least firm plans about your next step in life, then you're obviously trying for the fourth post-high-school option. Do nothing at all.

We'll save your parents the pain and embarrassment and tell you right now: Like Hell You Will. If you don't have a job now, or college or military plans, then your parents are right now deciding when and how to throw your tail out. Good-bye.

You might have felt that high school was a trial, but it was mild compared to what's ahead. If you think you can get by in life with your feet up and your hands folded, think again. Your parents didn't buy that house you're living in, or that food that you're eating by the ton, without gallons of sweat and acres of callouses to show for it. Neither will you. Nothing is free.

There are ways to Get Rich Quick, and all but one involves serious labor. That means work. "The sweat of your brow." If you have a good idea, and the skill to market your brainstorm, and the guts to see it through, you can indeed get rich almost overnight, with nothing more than a high school education. For an example, look at the guy who made a fortune selling all those stupid Pet Rocks. People are only too happy to give up money for stupid things. Use that knowledge.

However, most Get Rich Quick schemes are illegal. There's big-league money in drug dealing, for example, or car theft. But everybody now in prison will tell you -- they never expected to get caught. But they did. You will too if you cross the line. "Don't do the crime if you can't do the time."

If you don't get moving and your parents do throw you out, you have a few questions to ask yourself.

Number One: Where are you going to live? Have you looked at the cost of rental apartments lately? You won't believe it.

Number Two: What will you do for money, to cover the basic necessities like car payments, insurance, phone, food, etc? Mom and Dad can't afford to keep you supplied with spending cash.

Number Three: Who will you hang around with? Good, hard-working people who are looking toward the future, or borderline hoodlums who live for the moment, until they get caught?

No apologies offered if I slighted your friends. Really now, do they have a future, are they going to succeed in life, or do you just hang with them because they've always been your friends? That can be a hard question to ask, but ask it. The people around you are important to your development. Pick your friends with care, because you will become a reflection of them.

Your dear, loving parents will support you now, and they'll temporarily help out in the future if (and when) your ship of state hits the rocks. But don't expect them to help for very much longer if you're not seriously trying to get ahead. They love you, but don't make them draw the line, because they will. Parents can be your best allies when the shooting starts, and often the only friends you have. Don't blow that relationship.

Take this five second test and see how you do: Ask yourself where you'll be in five years, and what life will be like. Do it.

Will you be driving a new Ford Ranger with all the goodies, or still patching up your rusty old Datsun?

Will you own a house of your own, or will you be racing the cockroaches in a run-down apartment?

Will you be out of college and earning a five-digit salary, or still making the same $5 an hour you're getting now?

Will you be sitting in a U.S. Air Force base in the Pacific and deciding whether to re-enlist for four more years, or sitting at home, trying to fill out the paperwork for Welfare?

How you score on the test depends entirely upon you. Do you want to succeed, or are you content to fail?

Don't embarrass your parents or yourself. You're not stupid, else you'd have never made it through high school. Everybody left school with the same education, and most of them had plans for the future. If you don't have any, start making some.

What happens next is up to you. Good luck and God bless you.

Fire hits etching room at Analog

A fire on Sunday afternoon at Analog Devices brought hazardous materials units from Woburn and Burlington to aid Wilmington firefighters at the Woburn Street semiconductor facility.

The fire was in an etching room. It is believed to have been caused by a heating element which was left on under a vat. The fire was controlled by sprinklers, and firefighters used dry chemicals to extinguish the fire. Firefighters used encapsulated suits while in the building. The area contained xylene and sulfuric acid, but were not believed to be involved in the fire.

The fire took place about 3:30 p.m.

An Easter lily at the home of Lillian Misels on Federal Street in Wilmington has eight blooms. The plant, purchased last year, apparently does not have a calendar.

Backyard gardening

by Hugh Wiberg
Last week's column started with the lament that we appeared to be entering a 1988-like period of drought. This is one of those times when I am delighted to be wrong. The several good soakings of this past week have broken a two week dry spell and the summer of '89 continues to be a superb growing season for backyard gardeners. If we can avoid serious disease problems from here on, this will indeed be a banner year.

The summer squash is coming in, we will soon be picking green beans, and the pea vines are out of the garden to give the pumpkin vines more room to ramble. Several Atlantic Giant pumpkins appear to be pollinated and once a week applications of liquid Seven-at dusk - has kept the squash vine borer moths at bay.

Mrs. E.M. of Tewksbury writes: "I looked out the kitchen window this morning and saw four baby rabbits running around in our vegetable garden. I had read that chicken wire fencing, which we have, will keep the animals out. How did these little guys get through the fence, and what do I do now?"

Baby rabbits until half grown can move easily through three inch hole wire fencing. Take away a small rabbit's fur and there is almost nothing left. The good news is that young rabbits rarely do much damage in a garden. Mature rabbits, which can't get through a standard chicken wire fence, will do considerable damage in an unfenced garden. Their offspring, should they find their way into your lettuce and carrots, will take a little nibble here and there, and then, with the boundless energy and exuberance of youth, continue their wanderings. In two or three weeks they will be too large to slip through the fence. Meanwhile, if you don't want to take chances you can purchase fine mesh wire fencing at the hardware or garden supply store and attach it with string or twist ties to the inside of your present fence.

A.M. of Wilmington writes, "My pea plants were very productive this year. Thanks for your suggestion to mulch them heavily. This was the only thing I did different from last year and it seemed to work quite well. One problem; just before we started picking pods, we noticed a grayish white powdery substance on some of the stems and leaves. Fortunately we had picked most of the pods before this mold-like substance appeared. What do you think this was and how can I avoid it next year?"

Sounds very much like powdery mildew, a fungal disease common throughout New England. Powdery mildew can begin to appear where a combination of very moist soil combines with heat and humidity. Peas and beans are especially susceptible to this fungus. You can control powdery mildew by inspecting your plants every other day starting around June 10. If detected in its early stages, it can be checked and eliminated with a weekly application of Ortho's All Purpose Vegetable Fungicide, available at just about all garden centers. As soon as you notice the appearance of mildew on your plants, remove and destroy the affected parts and then apply the fungicide as directed on the bottle. Very important - if you water your garden in the morning so the plants will dry out during the day, you will greatly reduce the chance of seeing this and other diseases in your garden.

Got a question or problem? Write to the Town Crier, Backyard Gardening Column, P.O. Box 460, Wilmington, MA 01887.

Next week, more on insect controls.

To the gardener, peat moss is an indispensable ingredient of his soil mixture. It lightens heavy soils as well as giving body to light soils. Nurserymen use it in all types and sizes of plantings. Fortunately, peat moss is a renewable resource. It is constantly being created after partly-decayed vegetable matter has been deposited in boggy areas over a period of years. The best peat moss for gardening originates in Canada where it is the product of decayed sphagnum moss. For best handling, be sure to keep peat moss slightly damp. Do not allow it to become dust dry.

The quality of your soil greatly influences the health of your plants, shrubs, and trees. Don't skimp on soil. Peat moss offers an excellent, affordable source of nutrients for your soil. New facility opens

The Wilmington Woods Nursing Home is located on Woburn Street in South Wilmington, on property formerly owned by Bob Lewis.

Wilmington nursing home accepts first residents

The Wilmington Woods Nursing Home is open for business, and has accepted its first occupants. The first resident moved in last Wednesday, and as of Monday, there were three people living there.

The $7 million facility was recently completed on an 11-acre tract on Woburn Street near Eames Street.

Presently the facility has approval for occupancy by 20 residents. As those spaces are occupied and additional personnel are hired, more spaces will be submitted for approval, up to an occupancy level of 120 residents. Of those, 60 would be in a Level III residence area, and 60 in a Level II skilled nursing area.

Director Bill Ring said that the nursing home will be admitting four or five patients a week, over a six-month period.

Ring said that the goal of the nursing home is to bring people back to an optimum level of functioning, and to maintain them there. The facility includes physical therapy, occupational therapy and speech therapy, and will carry out medication and treatment as ordered by each patient's physician. All residents will be admitted only under a doctor's order.

Ring views the nursing home as more than just an institution. "We're going to do as many things as we can to make the facility as homey as an institution can be," he said. One noteworthy aspect of the facility is that pets will be allowed.

The decor of the building is quite attractive, but Ring was careful to stress that the decor and physical surroundings are secondary to the human services of the nursing home. He emphasized the importance of quality staff, caring people, and family involvement in each patient's care. "Our product is human service," he said.

"I do this type of work because I care, and because I get something back for that," Ring said.

"Most people wouldn't do this type of work for $40 an hour," he said, but he is looking for some good people to work with him, people who care about their work and about people.

The facility is owned by Mediplex, a firm which owns many nursing homes and is a subsidiary of Avon, the cosmetics company. Mediplex, Ring said, is a company with a strong commitment to nursing home administration.

Ring's family background is in nursing home administration. He is the fourth generation in his family in that line of work. His father owns a small nursing home in Amesbury; his uncle owns some nursing homes in Springfield, and his grandfather owned the Ring Nursing Home in Medford. The business was started by his great-aunt Abbie in Medford.

Ring grew up working in his father's nursing home, doing whatever chores needed doing. He then took up nursing home administration in college. After graduating, he managed the Den-Mar Nursing Home in Rockland, followed by a year of consulting and managing nursing homes under receivership.

Meals for the residents of the new nursing home will be prepared in this gleaming stainless steel kitchen by chef Chuck Berry. And don't ask him to play "Johnny Be Good." He's not that Chuck Berry.

Tech school committee will review contract

by Arlene Surprenant
The Shawsheen Tech School Committee will review individual evaluations of Superintendent - Director Charles Lyons at next Tuesday's meeting, preparatory to drawing up a new superintendent's contract. According to one committee member, there should be few if any problems with the contract since committeemen have been pleased with the new superintendent's performance thus far.

According to the committee's vice-chairman Kevin Sowyrda, each of the committeemen were given a five page form to fill out to evaluate Lyons' strengths and weaknesses. The evaluation form was based on a model from the National School Board Association and covers everything from Lyons' ability to negotiate and deal with the public to Lyons' knowledge of curriculum and his management style.

Lyons took over the superintendency in February 1988 from his predecessor Benjamin Wolk and was awarded a $68,000 contract. Sowyrda said Lyons' contract is due to expire this month.

In the short time Lyons has been at the helm, said Sowyrda, he has seen many accomplishments. The most significant improvement, he says, has been in the area of teacher morale and improved communication between faculty and the school administration. Sowyrda attributes this change directly to Lyons and his "gift" for motivating his staff. Sowyrda said Lyons has also worked hard to generate more money for the school and establish a good relationship with member towns and parents.

"I'm rating him absolutely at the top. He's a real innovative leader. I think Charlie found significant challenges at the Tech and, in a relatively short time, he changed the direction of the school," praised Sowyrda.

The vice-chairman said he felt fellow committee members would like to recognize Lyons' accomplishments through a pay raise in the new contract, but it will have to be one that's "reasonable," considering the current financial situation. Sowyrda added that Lyons' current salary is below that of other superintendents in the district and in other technical schools. Talks on the contract are expected to get underway Tuesday along with the superintendent's evaluation.

Guidance Counselor hours for July and August

As students move from one school year to another, it is not uncommon to have scheduling problems. Guidance counselors have always been available at Wilmington High School during summer vacation to assist students in finalizing their fall schedules.

This year, however, due to the reduced school budget, guidance counselors will be available only on a limited basis. One guidance counselor will be available for schedule adjustments and questions on the following days:

August: Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, August 1, 2, 3, 8, 9, 10, 15, 16, 17, 22, 23, 24, 30 and 31.

Parents and students may visit or call the school from 7:30 to 9:00 a.m. on the above dates by appointment (694-6068).

Council announces art show awards

The Ninth Annual Arts Show by the Wilmington Council for the Arts held Saturday, July 1, was a tremendous success. Over 200 people, viewed the 75 works of art beautifully portrayed at the Arts Center. It was a joy to witness the pleasure of so many children as well as adults...a happy time of looking and people meeting people. This is a center for all the people of Wilmington not only over the Fourth, but during every month of the year.

The Council was fortunate in having as judges three distinguished artists:

Eleanor Mahoney who has a studio in Reading where she conducts classes in drawing, pastels, oils and watercolor and a gallery in Kennebunkport, Maine. Ms. Mahoney has received many national and local awards. Her paintings are in corporate and private collections throughout the country.

Beatrice MacLellan of Wakefield, practicing portraiture and landscape painting. She is a member of the Concord, Newburyport, North Shore and Reading art associations and her work can be seen in private collections all over the United States.

Roberta Thresher, formerly director of art, Reading public schools. She is a member of many art associations including the Hudson Valley Art Association, Rockport Concord, Ma. and Reading associations. She has exhibited in many notable shows and her awards have been numerous.

The only work voted upon by the council is that which they select to receive the John D. Brooks Memorial Award. It is given to a Wilmington artist who has shown the most promise and progress in his work. This year it was awarded to Charlotte McCain for her "Five of Hearts" a collage which also won second prize in the miscellaneous category.

In oils the prize was won by Andrea Peters, a well-known Wilmington artist for her "Lake Quannapowitt." Second prize in oils was awarded to Lorraine DeGroot-Stevens (who teaches classes in oils at the Center). Third prize in oils went to Mary Saija for her "Untitled" painting.

In watercolors first prize was won by Elaine Bradley for her "From Rags to Stitches" and Ms. Bradley also won "Most Popular" for her watercolor, "Ocean Roses." Second prize was won by Diana Pasquarillo and third in watercolor by Elva S. Proctor for her "Seven Bottles."

Dorothy Richards won first prize in pastels for "Before Curtain-up."

In the photography category first, second and third prizes were given to Ray Capodanno, Betty Douglass and Dave Rugato.

In miscellaneous in addition to Ms. McCain's awards, first prize went to Joan Ward for "The Hawk" (ink on glass) and a merit award to Helen Handrahan for "Bird's Song" a delightful needlework.

The success of this show following similar occasions has prompted a suggestion by many that next year's exhibition be extended another day and into the evening hours.

To those who attended, thank you!

Melrose Rams-Wilmac Reds
The defending champion Melrose Rams edged the Wilmac Reds, 3-1 behind former Wilmington hurler Tim Budrewicz.

Reds' righthander Todd Rembis (1-2) pitched a strong game, allowing four hits, but the Rams put three doubles together in the fifth inning for two runs and the margin of victory.

The Reds exploded for six runs in the first inning highlighted by Paul Matachin's triple and Scott Hayes' double as the Wilmac club bombed the Augustine A's, 16-4 at Malden.

Melrose-Reds

Melrose shutout the Reds 3-0 at Alumni Field as Dave Marstens and Dennis Livingston combined for a three-hitter. Mark Bartnick (2-3) was the tough luck loser for Wilmac.

The Reds are 3-7-1 in league play while sporting a 7-9-1 overall record as the holiday break kept the Reds idle until July 5.

Reds-Peter Fuller

Veteran Wilmac righthander Joe Puleo (2-1) and rookie Steve Capezzuto combined for a one-hit rain shortened 6-0 triumph over the last place Fuller Club of Belmont.

Scott Bolton (three RBI's) and Paul Matachin (two RBI's) paced the Reds' offense.

Reds-Andre Realty

The Wilmac Reds came from behind, scoring two unearned runs in the top of the seventh inning to gain a 3-3 tie with Andre Realty at Medford.

Scott Hayes had a key single with the bases loaded in the seventh to pace the Reds' attack.

Augustines-Reds

The A's belted the Reds, 10-5 at Alumni Field, as Steve Capezzuto (3-3) was wild, throwing seven bases on balls, nine runs and nine hits in three plus innings.

Joe Puleo and veteran left-hander Jack Phyllis shut down the A's on one hit over the last four frames.

Sports medicine prepared for pain

SportsAid takes care

SportsAid Therapist and Athletic Trainer Karen O'Sullivan (left) is seen applying wrap to Pam Shriver, one of the top-ranked women tennis professionals in the world, at the 1988 Virginia Slims of New England (The Centrum, Worcester, Oct. 31-Nov. 6). A comprehensive sports medicine facility located at Malden Hospital and the CMK Fitness Center in Woburn, SportsAid is the Official Sports Medicine Consultant to the $300,000 Virginia Slims and to the U.S. Pro Tennis Tournament, the major men's professional tennis tournament in the area.

Sports Aid consults Pro Tennis

SportsAid, the comprehensive sports medicine center based in Malden, has for the second year in a row been named the Official Sports Medicine Consultants to the 1989 U.S. Pro Tennis Championships, to be held July 10-16 at Longwood Cricket Club in Brookline.

Now in its 26th year, the 1989 tournament will feature 56 professional tennis players from around the world including Andre Agassi, Mats Wilander and Kent Carlsson, competing for a purse of $425,000.

SportsAid's Head Athletic Trainer, Joe Rice, has been selected to assist Bill Norris, the official athletic trainer for the Pro-National Tennis Association, by providing training and treatment services throughout the week. Present at many professional tennis tournaments, Norris will be arriving at Longwood from the Wimbledon Championships in England.

According to Rice, the U.S. pro presents SportsAid with a valuable opportunity to treat some of the world's leading athletes. It also recognizes the professionalism of SportsAid's staff and the quality of its services. "It's extremely gratifying to have been chosen to work with the players at Longwood. As sports medicine professionals, we are committed to providing athletes at all levels, from high school team players to professionals, with the highest quality sports medicine services."

Injuries that are commonly treated include shoulder, wrist and elbow problems, sprains and strains of the knees and ankles, and blisters. The risk of heat related illnesses, including dehydration, heat exhaustion and heat stroke, also increases as the weather gets warmer.

SportsAid, a comprehensive sports medicine facility, was founded in 1984 to meet the needs of athletes ranging from the recreational to the professional.

Its primary goal is to treat injured athletes and return them to peak performance as promptly as possible. SportsAid is staffed with highly trained, experienced sports medicine specialists prepared to deal with any sports related pain or injury that may incapacitate an athlete or interfere with his or her performance.

Members of this team of professionals are athletes themselves and understand vigorous training and competition, as well as participation in sports for pleasure alone.

Why choose SportsAid?

SportsAid's aggressive approach to sports medicine returns injured athletes to total fitness as safely and rapidly as modern medicine will allow. A prompt and total recovery requires both expert diagnosis and an appropriate program of rehabilitation.

After an evaluation by an orthopedic surgeon, a personalized rehabilitation program is developed by a physical therapist or athlete trainer.

These programs are designed to minimize recovery time while restoring full health. Conditioning that reduces the possibility of repeating the injury is an important element of every program.

SportsAid professionals also recognize an athlete's need to stay in shape even when injured and are dedicated to helping the individual maintain overall fitness throughout the rehabilitation process.

SportsAid's team of specialists consists of orthopedic surgeons, registered physical therapists, licensed certified athletic trainers, strength and conditioning specialists, neuro-psychologists/sports consultants, x-ray technicians and sports nutritionists.

In addition to treating specific athletic injuries, SportsAid offers an array of important services.

These include: athletic training services, to high school teams, recreational and professional athletes; preventive programs, designed to prevent injuries from occurring in the first place; speaker's bureau, where staff experts speak on subjects related to sports medicine; cardiopulmonary testing services to identify at-risk individuals; sports nutrition counseling aimed at achieving proper nutrition for maximum performance; and, neuropsychology/sports consulting services to assist athletes in achieving peak performance through the integration of high level thinking and problem solving in training and competition.

Facilities and equipment

SportsAid is committed to providing the most up to date sports medicine facilities in the area.

SportsAid believes that "superior results require superior facilities." Toward that end, sports medicine specialists are involved in all decisions regarding equipment selection.

From initial evaluation to final treatment, state of the art equipment is employed. A full complement of diagnostic and x-ray equipment is on site, as well as a complete range of the most modern therapeutic and conditioning equipment available today: Cybex, Biodex, Orthotron, Fitron and Eagle.

Sports medicine multi-faceted

Ten years ago, sports medicine was seen as a field in which physicians treated competitive and professional athletes almost exclusively. Most of these physicians were orthopedists who rarely, if ever, limited themselves to the practice of sports medicine.

Today, the field of sports medicine barely resembles its infancy. It has grown into a multi-faceted area that caters not only to professionals, but to the amateur and so called "weekend athlete" as well.

The number of sports medicine facilities has doubled over the last seven years and services have been greatly expanded. The field now includes everything from

by Bill Conlon

When the fish are slow to bite, it always helps to have something to talk about. Talk of the Red Sox this year would bring out the clouds on the sunniest of days, and the Celts weren't much better.

So, I dug into my catch-basin-like memory and found a few old jokes. Some of them have been around so long that Jesus might have started them when He went fishing with the boys.

Please keep in mind that I find ethnic jokes abominable. Add your own ethnicity to these if you wish, but none for me, thanks.

Bob always brought in the biggest fish, and one day his old pal the game-warden asked if he could go along. A few minutes out from the dock, the warden was shocked to see Bob pull out a stick of dynamite from his tackle box, light it, and drop it into the water. BOOM!

"Hey, you can't do that!" cried the warden as Bob started picking up the shell-shocked fish.

Without a word, Bob lit a second stick and dropped it over the side.

"That's illegal as hell, Bob," said the warden after the boom faded. "I'm going to have to arrest you for that."

At which point Bob lit another stick and handed it to the warden.

"Are you going to fish or are you just going to talk all day?" he asked.

Two less-than-brilliant men were out deer hunting one day, and one was accidentally shot by his friend. After a long trek to the hospital, the accidental gunner asked "Well, can you save him, Doc?"

To which the doctor replied, "I probably could have, if you hadn't field-dressed him out first."

A moron was deer hunting one day and managed to bag a buck. He took the carcass by the hind legs and started dragging it to his truck.

A few minutes later another deer hunter chanced by and saw how much trouble the fool was having in dragging the animal, as the legs were catching on every snag.

"If you grab it by the antlers it'll be much easier to drag," offered the hunter. The goof thanked the man and changed his grip on the carcass.

As the hunter was heading back at day's end, he chanced upon the same idiot, still dragging his deer.

"This works much better," said the moron, "but I'm getting further and further from my truck."

Three stupid guys were captured by cannibals while exploring parts distant, and they were bound for the dinner pot later that day.

The chief of the tribe said, "We plan to eat your flesh, use your skulls for soup bowls, and make canoes out of your skins. You can kill yourselves if you wish, but that is our intention."

The first of the men asked if the tribe had a gun. When told they did he asked to borrow it the weapon, cried, "Here goes one of your soup bowls, chief" and promptly blew his brains out.

The second man said they'd never eat his flesh, so he dove into a local volcano and was consumed.

The third man, a dedicated fisherman, asked instead to borrow a fork. The chief was curious, but he complied with the request. Given the utensil, the man started stabbing himself vigorously with the fork, laughing, "So much for your canoe, eh, chief? How do you like that? Now your canoe is going to leak!"

An idiot went ice fishing one day, and before he could unpack all his gear, a loud voice thundered out of the sky:

"There are no fish there!" He looked around, but he couldn't see anybody.

Undaunted, he continued cutting his first hole in the ice when the voice again rumbled: "I said there are no fish there. Go home."

Still nobody in sight, so he started chopping his second hole. Again the big voice from the sky roared:

"I said there are no fish there. Go home now or you'll get in trouble!"

Afraid of invoking Divine wrath, the moron yelled, "Who are you?"

"I'm the manager of the skating rink, you idiot. Now go home!"

A fisherman was in the tavern, telling a tale of woe to the barkeep.

"My wife ran off with my best fishing buddy. It's awful."

The bartender said, "Gee, pal, that's rough. What a terrible loss."

"Yeah, I'll say," said the fisherman, "Fishing buddies like that are hard to find."

Two idiots were out fishing in the boat one day, and they both caught their limits. On the way back in, one of them asked if they'd be able to find that same spot the next day.

"No problem," said the other, "I marked an X on the side of the boat so we can find the spot again."

Two guys were out ice fishing, but were having no luck at all. A few yards away, though, a kid was hauling out fish one after another.

Curious, the men wandered over and asked the kid his secret.

The kid mumbled a reply that was unintelligible.

Again they asked what the kid was using to catch his fish, and again his answer was a senseless mumble.

"Look, kid, maybe you have some trouble speaking, so could you just point and show us your secret?" one of the men asked.

The kid then leaned his head forward and spat out a huge glob of nightcrawlers. "I've told you twice already, you've got to keep the bait warm," then popped the big worms back into his mouth.

Well, that's all I could remember. Yes, most of them were old back when Jesus helped cast the net with his buddies, but what can you do? Anybody out there got any better ones? 658-2346.

--- Tackle Box ---

I'm on vacation this week, taking a few days to catch up on things like housework (ick!) and fishing (ah!), so there isn't much to say. Besides, the only thing on the slate is the July 23 Greater Lowell Fly Fishers carp derby, so mark it down. Later.

orthopedic surgery to ophthalmology to psychology. The tremendous growth and change in sports medicine has been caused primarily by the American fitness boom.

Today, more than 30 million young people are involved in sports, competitively and recreationally. One of every two adults exercises regularly. Millions of Americans are jogging, biking, skiing, participating in exercise classes, golfing, and playing tennis - and they are testing the limits of their physical potential. As a result, more than 17 million sports related injuries occur annually.

Recent surveys indicate that soccer yields the most injuries, followed by running and various ball games. Knee injuries are the most common treated by sports medicine facilities, but ankle and back injuries are also typical.

Physical problems related to overuse exceed acute injuries, especially in sports such as running and aerobics.

Otocom named "Small business of the year"

Good things do come in small packages - in this case the small packages are state-of-the-art data communications products. The Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce has announced that Otocom Systems, Inc., a five-year-old, Wilmington based manufacturer and exporter of data communications products has won the coveted title "Small Business of the Year" for 1989.

Otocom Systems, Inc. designs, manufactures, and markets data communications products for both U.S. and international markets. With products installed in more than 45 countries worldwide, including Japan, Australia and United Kingdom, Otocom offers positive proof that with quality products and effective marketing strategies, American businesses can compete successfully in international markets. In accomplishing this feat, Otocom has set an example for U.S. high tech firms.

Company co-founders Van Chu, chairman and Ian R. Davison, president, accepted the award for Otocom before an audience of nearly 1,000 business and government leaders at the 80th annual meeting of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce held recently at the Westin Hotel.

James L. Sullivan, president of the Chamber, commented on Otocom's selection, "This company is a wonderful example of the entrepreneurial spirit and dynamism of so many of our small businesses. Otocom typifies the world-class excellence of many of the high tech companies in and around Boston. The firm's founders and employees could be very proud of what they have accomplished in such a short period of time."

Otocom is the brainchild of two previously successful entrepreneurs, co-founders Van Chu and Ian Davison. Van Chu was born in China and educated in Australia and the U.S. Ian Davison was born and educated in England. The two joined forces in 1984 and selected Massachusetts as their base of operations. As Davison explained, "We traveled throughout the country searching for a suitable headquarters site. No other region offers the wealth of resources to a new venture that we find here in Massachusetts."

In the five years since its inception, Otocom's revenues have grown at an average annual rate of over 350 percent. The number of employees has nearly kept pace, growing from three to over 120 full time employees.

During the presentation ceremony, Robert Dumont, chairman of the Chamber's Small Business Committee, said, "Otocom's dedication to product excellence and technical innovation has resulted in several industry firsts. Otocom is recognized throughout the world as having brought to market the first auto-dial modem to incorporate four international operating standards."

Otocom developed the first fully integrated, dial network management system. The firm's commitment to customer support has also won industry recognition. Otocom's customer list reads as a Multinational Fortune 500, including the world's largest banks network providers and national telephone companies.

The sustained enthusiasm and commitment to excellence among the company's employees was evident to the selection committee when they made the site visit. According to W. Lambert Welling, chairman of the Chamber's 1989 Small Business of the Year Committee, "In addition to the firm's worldwide recognition and financial stability since its founding in 1984, Otocom has demonstrated outstanding corporate responsibility in its employee relationships and as a member of the local community."

The award, established by the Chamber to increase awareness of the valuable contribution made by smaller businesses to the Greater Boston community, is presented annually by the Chamber's Small Business Committee in recognition of the firm's entrepreneurial achievements and contributions to the community. Nominees undergo an extensive review process which culminates in a vote of approval by the Chamber's Board of Directors.

Previous winners are the Charles River Broadcasting Company (WCRB, 102.5 FM, "Classical Radio Boston"), Goldweitz & Company, Middlesex Truck & Coach of Roxbury and Inc. Magazine.

CRSAB and Ford Motor lease space at Met Tech Park

The New England Telephone Company's Centralized Repair Service Attendant Bureau (CRSAB) and the Ford Motor Credit Company have leased a combined total of 29,800 square feet of office space at 100 Ames Pond Drive in Metropolitan Technology Park, bringing occupancy at the 76,400 square foot building to 100 percent. Owned and developed by Metropolitan Life Real Estate Investments, the 400,000 sq. ft. Metropolitan Technology Park is an R&D and office development located on Route 133 in Tewksbury, two miles from the Route 93 intersection.

CRSAB, which handles repair calls for the entire New England area, has relocated two of its area facilities into 20,000 square feet of office space at 100 Ames Pond Drive. One hundred Ames Pond Drive is one of three buildings in Metropolitan Technology Park.

"The move to 100 Ames Pond Drive allows us to modernize our equipment and facilities and create a more ergonomically designed service bureau," said Kevin Kelly, staff manager of CRSAB. Approximately 100 employees will operate around the clock shifts in the new offices.

The Boston-North office of Ford Motor Credit Company, which provides financial services to dealerships and retail customers in the United States and Canada, recently moved into 9,800 square feet of space at 100 Ames Pond Road. Approximately 50 employees work at the Metropolitan Technology Park location. Ford Motor Credit Company is headquartered in Dearborn, Michigan and employs approximately 7,000 people nationwide.

Chip Batchelder of R.M. Bradley represented Ford Motor Credit Company with their lease, while David Ho of Nynex Properties Company represented CRSAB. Peter Mackie and David Pergola of Meredith & Grew, the exclusive leasing and management agency for the park, handled the Ford Motor credit company and CRSAB transactions respectively.

Opened in 1980, the Boston real estate investment office of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company currently has nearly $1 billion in assets under management. In addition to Metropolitan Technology Park, its regional properties include Metropolitan Corporate Center in Marlborough; Unicom Park in Woburn; Methuen Mall in Methuen; Auburn Mall in Auburn; and Rhode Island Mall in Warwick.

Metropolitan Life is a joint owner of One Financial Center and 101 Arch Street Office Towers in Boston's Financial District.

Teachers complete in-house training

The Wilmington School Department has just completed its second year of course offerings designed to provide quality programs of learning featuring some of the best speakers and educators in the country.

An in-service commission was established and consisted of administrators and teachers who worked together to recruit those speakers and educators who were determined to best benefit the needs of the professional staff here at Wilmington.

All levels of education from kindergarten to high school were involved in choosing speakers and programs designed to meet specific goals that the committee felt were most beneficial to our school system.

Some of the people who have presented workshops are: Richard LaVoie, Developing a Philosophy on Mainstreaming and Preventive Discipline; Andrea Gomes, Drama in the Classroom; Carl Ronke, Project Adventure; Dr. Robert Fraser, Legal Issues; Dr. David Booth, Whole Language Process; Jack Agati, Teachers as Leaders and the Teacher as a Professional; Dr. William Spohn, Thinking Skills; Rexanne Mendrinis, Telecommunications.

Attorney Richard Sullivan, Special Education Legal Issues and Answers; Janice Gadaire, Folk Arts in Education; Floy Miller, Designing and Implementing a Proficiency-oriented Curriculum in a Foreign Language Class; Dr. George Ladd, Science-Basic Skills; Klein Associates, New Issues in Discrimination; Dr. David Elkind, The Hurried Child; Ann Murray, Transactional Analysis for Teachers; Paul Caron, Changing Family Structure and Discipline.

and Due Process; Andrea Steinberg, Arts in Math and Science; Anita Rogerson, Movement as an Educational Tool; and Bill Halloran, Reading and children's Literature.

The seminars were offered on five separate days during the year. The children were dismissed at noon and the programs took place from 1 to 4 p.m.

This past year there was one workshop day run entirely by our own teachers and which offered a wide variety of courses such as: Experiencing First Choice (computers) taught by Cathy Bell; Writing Across the Curriculum, by Cathy Symonds; Problem Solving As An Educational Tool by Rick Barry; Proficiency in a Foreign Language by Louise Bocchino; Children's Literature: Reading Aloud by Martha Mahoney; Barbara Beaucher, and Karen Hebert; Useful Classroom Programs With Apple by Robert Young.

Computers and Language Arts by Michael Michalski; Developing An Electronic Bookshelf by Michael Tikonoff; Expectations by Chris Martes; CPR Recertification by Laura Stinson and Computer Use in Special Education by Karen Grossman. Also conducted by outside agencies for that day was a Museum of Science Outreach Program by Renee Harvit and Conflict Resolutions by F. Klein. It was a great opportunity for some of the multi-talented teachers in Wilmington to share their expertise with other colleagues. Over 70 percent of the teachers felt the programs were relevant, provided valuable information, and that the presenter did an excellent job.

Funding for the programs came from a variety of sources such as state block grants, chapter 188 state funding and the school department funding.

The In-Service Commission was first chaired by Mr. Cleo Fredette, director of special education in Wilmington. He served as chairman from the spring of 1987 to the spring of 1988. Mr. Fredette says, "The In-Service Commission represents an excellent example of participatory planning and cooperation between administrators and teachers. Through this commission teachers, for the past two years, have had a direct say in what staff development programs were needed and would be offered to them."

It is a process that strengthens communication within the system and helps to maintain the high standard of teaching services to the students of Wilmington." He goes on to say, "Inasmuch as I was the first Chairman of the In-Service Commission, I look back at my chair with pride and a sense of accomplishment. This important process of ongoing teacher training will need continued support in these days of severe financial constraints."

Due to the high success rating of these workshops by the participants (close to 80 percent of all programs were found to be extremely valuable), we hope to continue these courses as long as the funding continues.

We will make available our upcoming schedule for next year in plenty of time to let more people in town take advantage of some of these unique course offerings.

Mr. Robert Coffill, principal at the Shawsheen School in Wilmington, and the second chairman of the commission for this past year, feels that this year's program was a huge success. He says, "It was a pleasure to chair this procedure; the positive relationship between the faculty, administration, parents, and students was simply outstanding. This program is a direct reflection of improvement in instruction for the Wilmington School system. This is really the bloodline of any good school system."

At our last meeting on May 18, next year's schedule was planned and a new chairperson was elected. For the first time, a teacher was chosen to head up the commission for the 1989-90 school year. Michelle Nortonen, a fourth grade teacher at the Shawsheen School and a finalist for Teacher of the Year in Massachusetts, was unanimously elected. Michelle says, "Wilmington's teachers are a dedicated group of educators who have never shirked from their professional responsibilities. I look forward to assuming the role of chairperson of our Professional Development Committee. This commission, whose members represent the educational community of Wilmington, have decided to offer five in-service days next year with a marked change in format."

The first three sessions will be curriculum-oriented, with teachers taking ownership for the subject matters they teach. The particular areas will be examined, revised, and reevaluated. Teachers will be given an opportunity to meet with their colleagues to share information, strategies, and successful teaching techniques. Such collegiality is an important ingredient in promoting effective schools.

The format of the last two workshops will be similar to what is in place currently. Speakers from the outside will come to address the teachers. The topics of interest will be based upon a needs assessment survey conducted in April.

Next year will mark the first time educational support staff (para-professionals, aides, secretaries, and nurses) will be given an opportunity to sit on the board and to facilitate workshops geared to their professional needs.

As you can see, we believe that learning is an ongoing process. It is important for our students to understand that their teachers also go to school, participate in workshops, and read to keep abreast of current trends in their chosen field. Wilmington teachers practice what they preach!"

One new area to be explored for next year's programming is to include courses for secretarial staff, nurses, aides and other support personnel within the school system.

Superintendent William Fay has indicated that curriculum development evaluation and revision are priority goals that the commission should keep in mind.

A SURETY THING

When a small business has a surety bond, it guarantees that the work done by the company will be carried out according to plan. This is of great comfort to the bonded company's potential clients because the company's performance is guaranteed by the surety. Thus, surety bonds help small companies to compete with larger firms. A small construction company with a surety bond, for example, could put in a paid for a public construction project and expect equal consideration with larger contractors. The surety bond offers the guarantee that the principal (the small construction company) is honest and is financially able to carry out the work for which it is bonded. To be accorded such guarantees by a surety, the principal must make available extensive information about itself to the surety, and, in some cases, put up collateral before a bond is issued.

Remembering the Bismarck

By CAPT. LARZ NEILSON

Editors Note: Capt. Larz Neilson is presently editor of the Wilmington Town Crier and during World War II was a Liberty Ship Captain serving in the Atlantic at the time of the Bismarck's sinking

Robert Ballard, undersea explorer and scientist on June 8 of this year found the sunken German battleship Bismarck, on the bottom of the Atlantic, 600 miles off the coast of France. It was in an upright position two and one-half miles below the ocean surface.

Ballard is of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. He is the same person who found the Titanic, four years ago.

The story was widely told, by radio, tv and newspaper about June 23. It was of interest to many, some of whom had never heard of that vessel.

To people who spent World War II at sea it was of special interest. Naval buffs and historians were also interested.

Some of the naval buffs, it seems, have been suggesting that the Bismarck had been sunk by her own crew, according to some reports.

The writer was at sea, over 1000 miles southerly of the site of that battle on May 27, 1941. Like many ship's officers he followed the events by shortwave, from Radio London, the BBC.

The BBC was the best source for news for ships at that time. Radio Berlin could also be heard world wide but the language was not understood by many. American shortwave stations were, at best, inadequate.

If Adolf Hitler had allowed two more years for the German Navy to prepare it would have been a powerful instrument of war. The Bismarck and her sister, the Tirpitz were powerful battleships of about 44,000 tons. Each was well armored on the sides. Each had eight guns with 15 inch caliber. The area below the waterlines was sub-compartmented, so as to reduce the underwater damage caused by torpedoes.

Construction on the Bismarck was nearly complete, in early 1941. The Tirpitz, her sister, was not completed until about two years after the Bismarck.

Each of the two vessels were dangerous enemies of the British - the Royal Navy. The task was not easy for Britain stood alone against the might of the modern Germany. The Royal Navy had to have several battleships ready at all times, in case those vessels attempted to sortie, i.e. leave their bases.

It was about May 18, 1941 that the Bismarck left her base, a German port in the Baltic Sea. She was to last nine days, only, but those were eventful days.

Flying the flag of Admiral Lutjens, and in the company of the German heavy cruiser Prinz Eugen, she steamed up the Kattegat, between Denmark and Sweden, and into the North Sea. Lutjens took her around the north of Iceland, and into the Denmark Strait, between Iceland and Greenland.

The Royal Navy had three battleships and the battle cruiser Hood, two on each side of Iceland. The Hood, battle cruiser, could fire as heavy salvos as any battleship, but did not have any protective side armor. Constructed in 1916, she was designed to catch enemy cruisers at sea, and could travel at high speeds.

The Bismarck promptly sank the Hood. She used "plunging" shellfire from her eight guns. Only four salvos were needed. Only four men from the Hood survived. The date was May 23, 1941.

The Bismarck and the Prinz Eugen headed south, into the middle of the North Atlantic. There were 11 convoys on the Atlantic. If the Bismarck could elude the British battleships she could cause tremendous destruction.

Admiral Sir John Tovey commanded the British fleet. There were several battleships and other vessels. Lutjens detached the Prinz Eugen, and sent it to the coast of France.

Then there was the encounter, out in the middle of the ocean. The shells of the British vessels repeatedly struck the Bismarck, but the heavy armour of that vessel prevented any damage. Torpedoes were used, some dropped by aircraft. They were not too effective because of the heavy sub compartmentation, beneath the water line.

Finally the Bismarck suffered damage to her rudder. She was unable to steer, and went round and round in circles. The Bismarck still had motive power, but she was unable to direct her travel.

Admiral Tovey sent in the Dorsetshire, a cruiser of the Royal Navy. Her orders were to use torpedoes against the screws and

ROVING

PART ONE

Sunday evening I arrived home to discover a bird had become trapped inside my fireplace. The sound of my key entering the lock, the deadbolt sliding back, wood chafing against wood as the door separated from its frame, slightly swollen from days of high humidity, must have frightened the tiny creature, and he began to flutter wildly about on the bottom of the inside of the fireplace.

At first the sound caused my heart to skip a beat: had someone gotten inside my house, and was he now alarmed that the owner has arrived home? As soon as I shut the door behind me, I realized what had happened. Just recently my parents had told me the story of how a giant black bird had managed to fly down their fireplace. Only their fireplace didn't have a screen in front of it, and they were forced to open all the windows in their apartment, hoping that the bird would eventually fly away. Eventually, he did.

This time, the bird was trapped behind a screen, unable to fly aimlessly around my kitchen (the fireplace is located in the kitchen, opposite a bar and the dining area, and between the door leading to the driveway and an eight-foot slider which leads to a back deck).

I flicked on overhead spotlights, then peered cautiously inside the fireplace drum (the fireplace is a modern fireproof style, actually, and it sits in the middle of the floor,

WILMINGTON — The only Air Force civilian employee to be so honored, Wilmington's Dennis J. Volpe is one of 56 mid-career executives from the United States to be named an Alfred P. Sloan Fellow.

In its 58th year, the fellowship program has given more than 1,800 alumni a chance to step from specialized to general management positions and to rise to significant leadership positions throughout the world.

Assistant Deputy Commander for International Programs at Hanscom Air Force Base, Volpe is assigned to MITRE and works in foreign military sales - overseeing such projects as the $3.7 billion Peace Shield program for Saudi Arabia.

He has already begun working toward a master of science in management degree at M.I.T.'s School of Management.

WINCHESTER — Summer hours at the Winchester library have been cut back to 40 per week - and library personnel taking vacation or sick leave will not be replaced this summer - due to a lack of funding by spring Town Meeting.

With its operating budget reduced by $83,956 to the Fin-Com's recommended $603,953, the library will increase its hours to 50.5 in the fall, half an hour above the minimum time which it must be open to receive state support.

BURLINGTON — Lieutenant William R. Soda was recently named Burlington's new Chief of Police - after a Civil Service exam in February and the creation of the town's first "Assessment Center" to further determine his qualifications.

Serving on the latter body were Danvers Chief of Police Chris Bourias, Winchester Town Administrator Chad Maurer and Lahey Clinic Associate Administrator Robert Minton.

Although three selectmen immediately voiced their displeasure with the appointment, selectman chair Ann Marie Baden expressed her feeling that the center took the political aspect out of the process and that it should be used for making other appointments.

Others felt the center took the decision out of the Burlington community.

The course will provide instruction about personal and home safety, toys and activities, child and infant care, fire safety, emergency, and beginning first aid.

Attendance at both sessions is mandatory. Students who successfully complete the course receive certificates. The participants names will be added to the Winchester Hospital babysitting referral list with parental permission.

The course fee is $20. For further information and registration call 729-9000, Ext. 3010.

New fertility center is operating near to capacity

Less than six months after opening, the Fertility Center at New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham is operating at capacity, according to its director, Dr. Vito R.S. Cardone.

Speaking at a professional meeting of invited obstetricians and nurses, Dr. Cardone said the new clinic has "exceeded all our estimates of success" and is months ahead of schedule. He attributed the surge in demand from childless couples to "word of mouth" from many couples who have achieved successful pregnancies.

"My biggest problem now is finding another obstetrician to assist me and my staff with admissions," Dr. Cardone said. "We are already booked to capacity through November of this year."

Dr. Cardone, who opened the Fertility Center in February, made his remarks (June 14) on the occasion of the Rigby Lectures given annually at the hospital. The lectures honor the late Dr. Robert Rigby, head of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at New England Memorial Hospital for 14 years.

The 1989 lectures were delivered by Dr. David Roy, an internationally known medical ethicist, and Dr. Burton V. Caldwell, a reproduction specialist at Yale Medical School.

Pest management gardening tips

The vegetable production season is just beginning. It is the time for commercial as well as home vegetable growers to take account of the strategies which will be economical and effective for the control of insect pests, according to Thurston Handley, Horticulture Specialist with Middlesex Cooperative Extension.

1. Check plants thoroughly at least twice a week.
2. Be aware of the life stages of the major insect pests on the crops being grown - (e.g. egg, larvae, pupae, adult).
3. Do not spray until the pest population reaches a critical level. (Beneficial insects may provide a natural control for the first several weeks. Early

Tall Ship is open

The three-masted, tall ship H.M.S. Bounty will sail into Boston Harbor July 12 to kick off the 1989 H.M.S. Bounty Maritime Movie Tour.

The ship, a re-creation of the 18th-century British merchantman whose crew mutinied against the infamous Capt. William Bligh 200 years ago, will take Boston-area tourists aboard for a hands-on nautical adventure July 12-14 while it is docked at the World Trade Center in South Boston.

Costumed guides — who double as the crew — will explain the workings of the 169-foot, square-rigged ship. On board, visitors will see authentic

Many area grads from Bentley

Federal Reserve Bank of Boston President Richard F. Syron rapped society's "lionizing of the short-term artists" and told graduates at Bentley College's 70th Commencement exercises May 20 that America's "true heroes" are those who work for the long-term interests of the country and the world.

Syron urged the graduates to take a "broader interest in your government and society," and suggest public service as a means to address the problems their generation will face. "The costs of good government pale in comparison to the cost of bad government," he said.

Syron was awarded an honorary doctorate by Bentley, as were outgoing Radcliffe College President Matina Souretis Horner and Schlumberger Limited Executive Vice President (retired) John E. Rhodes.

Bentley College President Gregory H. Adamian also called for a commitment to serving others. "We must look beyond our own gain, to see the good we can do for those who are without our advantages," he said. "This will contribute immeasurably to dousing the fire of greed and indifference that threatens us."

The college awarded degrees to 1,095 undergraduate and 292 graduate students. Local students include:

between two wrought iron railings and in front of a huge barnboard and marble mantle). Even though I knew the bird was trapped inside, protected from the rest of the house by a huge metal screen, I sensed that at any moment this harnessed creature would suddenly break loose from his confinement and dart straight for my face.

What I discovered was a small black bird, no more than six inches long, huddled as far back in the drum as he could possibly go. From within the shadow of the drum, I could see his tiny face — which appeared eyeless in the dark shadow — staring up at me. He seemed to shiver, as if frightened that perhaps I was going to try to do harm to him. I softly uttered a few words, as if the sound of my cadence would assure him that nothing was going to hurt him.

I pulled back, wondering what in heaven's name I was going to do with him. It was dark outside, and I wasn't about to simply let this little black bird fly freely through my house. I contemplated several ways to help him free himself, then dismissed each of them. It was too late. The bird would have to spend the night inside the drum.

"Good night, little fellow," I said, switching out the lights. "I hate to leave you there, but for now, I don't have much choice."

I retired to the bedroom, where sleep didn't come easily that night. I lay awake most of the night, thinking about the events of the past several weeks. Janet had made another appearance in my life. This time, nearly two years after we had broken up, she was telling me things were different. She had been sober for nearly those two years apart; she was attending AA meetings on a regular basis, and she was finishing up her second year at Regis College, in Weston. She'd hoped that we could get back together again. "It will be different this time," she had said during one of our initial phone conversations. "I am a different woman than the one you knew before."

The one who'd nearly killed herself from substance abuse. The one whom I allowed to nearly destroy my life. Love makes people do strange things to themselves. You allow yourself to go through pain and hurt that you would otherwise never allow to happen to you. And because I still loved her — "You will always be the love of my life," I had told her on the phone that day, I was willing to be open-minded about her sudden return. I prayed to God that it wasn't like all the other surprise returns, the returns that always ended with me sitting alone at the dinner table, as the candles burned down slowly into lonely heaps of tear-shaped wax and the roast beef dinner sat untouched and growing cold. Well, there was always the big bottle of Perrier water and the Richard Marx album to keep me company.

I don't remember when, but at some point after that uneasy fear crossed my brain, I drifted off to sleep.

The next morning, I awoke with a nauseous feeling creeping along the inside walls of my stomach. It wasn't part of a hangover — I hadn't drunk alcohol the night before. Perhaps it was the heat and humidity. The weathergirl, speaking from inside my alarm clock radio, was telling me that it was already 78 degrees outside, and it was going to be humid as blazes by midday. Or perhaps my sick-feeling stomach was the aftermath of a restless, nearly sleepless night, a night spent with my mind constantly racing with thoughts of Janet. There was a moment when I wondered if her return hadn't been real; perhaps it was all a dream, a dream that had left me sleeping on damp sheets and pillowcases. No, her return wasn't a dream. And I was facing some very real, very big decisions.

I buried those big decisions for the time being, and rolled out of bed. As I made my way into the kitchen, I was struck with another dream-like thought: the bird! Had I actually found a bird flapping around wildly inside my fireplace, or had that, too, possibly been a dream?

I wandered over to the fireplace and peered inside. There he was, huddled as far back against the drum wall as possible. This time, the bright light of early morning permitted me to catch a glimpse of his eyes. They conveyed fear, the same kind of fear that I felt once as a kid when a bully threatened to beat the living daylight out of me. Only I wasn't about to hurt this little guy. I softly muttered a few reassuring words to him, hoping once again that he'd understand my intentions.

"I only want to help you get free," I told him. But how was I going to do that? Surely I didn't want him flying aimlessly through my house. So I was going to have to assess the situation for awhile, then get back to him.

"In the meantime, relax, little fellow, relax," I said.

I made a cup of coffee, and stood against the bar as I sipped it, allowing my mind to drift back to thoughts of Janet. I wanted desperately to put the past in the past and to open myself up to the possibility of the two of us getting back together again. The dream of our reunion, with her sober and clean, had always remained with me. Now, for some unexplainable reason, I was being given the chance to see that dream come true.

I glanced over at the black bird. "What do you think I should do?" I asked him, as if he were a roommate, able to respond with just the right advice I needed to hear. "Should I go into this reunion with my eyes open and my heart shut? Or should I close my eyes and simply let my heart be my guide?"

The tiny black bird, with minuscule orbs staring me right in my eyes, regarded me with odd curiosity, then quickly turned away, once again burying himself in the rear of the drum.

Suddenly there was the sound of a key in my back door. It was my father, paying his weekly Monday morning visit. We have lunch together every Monday morning, then my father joins his friends at the race track for the day. It has been a ritual ever since my parents moved to New Hampshire five years ago.

We exchanged our customary greetings, as he set down a grocery bag brimful with food for our lunch. This, too, was a tradition: he would prepare lunch at home, then bring it down for us to eat at my house. He laid out a copy of the morning paper for me to read, while he poured over the daily racing sheets.

As I made us a fresh pot of coffee, I announced that a bird had found his way into my fireplace. My father glanced over to see the tiny creature. He had, surprisingly, not made a sound since my father had entered the house. I thought he would have made the same kind of racket he made when I entered the house the night before.

"What do you think I should do with him?" I asked my father, as we both sipped from our cups of steaming hot coffee.

He suggested that I try to capture the bird in a giant green trash bag, or cover him with a blanket, then let him go free outside. The idea sounded fine in theory, but I was sure that the tiny creature inside my fireplace was a heck of a lot faster than either one of us, and I wasn't about to let him loose in my house. I nixed that idea.

"Maybe I should just let it die," I said. "After it's dead, I can just scoop him up and throw him out into the field."

The idea sounded cruel, but I honestly couldn't come up with a better solution. We decided to not come to a conclusion as to what to do; instead, we returned to our newspapers and coffee. Later we shared a couple of roast beef sandwiches. At one point, I caught my father staring at the bird. I didn't think much of it, until I looked back again and found him dropping several small pieces of bread inside the fireplace.

"What are you doing?" I asked him. "If you start feeding him, I'll never be able to get rid of him."

Part two next week.

Winchester's endowment

from S-1

Winchester Hospital to continue to build upon its endowment.

The rising cost of health care and the threats to health care institutions, brought on by restrictive reimbursement regulations, are troublesome. Nine out of ten hospitals in the state will lose money this year.

Winchester Hospital is one of those hospitals which is facing a deficit from operations. Unlike most, however, endowment income is allowing them to continue improvements in facilities, equipment, and programs.

"Because endowment will play an increasingly important role in the total funding picture of the hospital, an ongoing effort to attract planned gifts in support of endowment is being initiated," explains Mark Kostegan, vice president of Fund Development.

A special giving society will be developed and will recognize those individuals who make a provision for the future of Winchester Hospital through their will, estate and/or trust plans.

Investment of gifts made to the Endowment fund will be guided by investment trustees James Willing, William Budd and Daniel Ahearn.

For additional information on endowment giving or suggestions on the reduction of tax liability through charitable giving, contact Mark Kostegan at 729-9000, ext. 3043.

the rudder of the Bismarck. Those torpedoes were effective and caused the ship to sink.

As it sank the Bismarck turned over. About a thousand German seamen had succeeded in getting off the sinking vessel. The ships of the Royal Navy moved in to rescue those Germans.

Then a periscope was spotted, a periscope from a German submarine. Admiral Tovey had to protect his ships. He ordered the ships to "scatter." Only about 115 German seamen were picked up before that order was given.

Anyone who wants to suggest that the Bismarck was sunk by her captain, or anyone else of her crew is free to do so.

PROTECT ELDERS FROM HEAT STRESS

Trainings to protect elders from heat stress are available through a partnership between the Mass. Executive Office of Elder Affairs and seven local utility companies.

The ongoing trainings are the result of a public-private initiative developed in response to last summer's scorching heat wave, which put thousands of elders at risk of heat stress.

Trainings are free and are targeted to professionals working with elders. Trainees learn to identify and prevent heat stress and return to their communities to educate elders and other elder service professionals.

To find out more about the trainings, please call the Executive Office of Elder Affairs at 1-800-882-2003 or a utility partner: Bay State Gas; Boston Edison; Cambridge Electric Light; Com/Electric; Com/Gas, Eastern Edison, Mass. Electric, and Western Mass. Electric.

DON'T TAKE POOR SLEEP LYING DOWN

Don't let worry about poor sleep keep you awake at night.

A free brochure, entitled "Don't Take Poor Sleep Lying Down," explains some of the causes of poor sleep and gives advice on how to talk to a doctor about sleeping difficulties.

The brochure has been endorsed by the American Sleep Disorders Association, a group of sleep disorders centers and individual members united to improve the quality of care for patients with sleep disorders.

About 35 percent of adult Americans experience some sleeping difficulties at least once a year, and half of those people consider their sleeping problems serious. A doctor should be consulted when the inability to get sleep or to stay asleep interferes with daytime functioning.

Consumers who would like to receive this brochure can obtain it by sending a postcard with their name and address on it to: Sleep Brochure, Sleep Science Information Center, P.O. Box B307, Coventry, CT 06238.

"USER FRIENDLY" MBTA PASSES DEBUT

The MBTA's redesigned monthly pass system will go into effect on July 1, making passes "simpler and easier to use," said General Manager Thomas P. Glynn.

New prices went into effect for passes beginning this month and the T will launch a special "Sizzling Summer" promotion which will allow passholders to use any pass anywhere throughout the MBTA system on weekends in July and August.

"This special summer promotion means you can go anywhere the T goes as long as you have a pass - any pass - for no additional charge," Glynn said. "Bus passholders will be able to use their passes on commuter rail to travel to North Shore beaches or historic sights throughout the region. It will be a real benefit for people who want to take in the sights, sounds and pure enjoyment of summer - in addition to using the pass for their normal daily travel."

The new passes reflect the three basic types of service used by more than 90 percent of the MBTA's customers: a local bus pass, a subway pass, and a combination subway/bus pass.

The local Bus pass prices have not increased, and continue to cost $18 per month. The pass is good for any 50-cent fare on local buses, trackless trolleys or the Mattapan High Speed Line, and can be used by passengers riding at street level on the Green Line.

The Subway pass costs $27 each month, and is equivalent to a 75-cent fare. It can be used by Red (except Quincy Adams, and Braintree), Blue, Orange and Green Line riders, as well as by commuter rail passengers in Zones 1A and 1B. Riders on the Green Line's Riverside branch in Newton must use the Combination pass.

The Combination pass is good on all local buses, the majority of the subway system (except at Quincy Adams and Braintree stations), some Express Buses and for $1.25 commuter rail zones (1A and 1B).

A fourth pass, the ComboPlus, costing $48 per month, will be good on all local buses, the entire subway system and for the first $1.50 fare on Express Buses (with any difference to be paid in cash).

Two other passes, a Zone 1 and Zone 2 pass, are available. The Zone 1 pass, $52 monthly, may be used for all ComboPlus services, as well as on $1.65 Express Buses and Zone 1 commuter rail trains. The Zone 2 pass extends passage to $1.90 Express Bus and Zone 2 commuter rail travel, at $61 a month.

FREE BOOKLET ON HEART DISEASE

Someone dies from heart disease every 32 seconds. It is the leading cause of death in the U.S., claiming 540,000 lives every year. But what causes heart attacks? How can they be prevented? Who is most at risk and why? These and many other basic questions are answered in layman's terms in "Some Answers About Coronary Heart Disease", the latest publication on heart disease from the American Health Assistance Foundation.

To understand coronary heart disease and its causes, it is important to know how the heart works, how it can be damaged, and what can be done to keep it healthy. But for many people, finding this information, presented in terms they can understand, is not always easy. For this reason, AHAF has produced a new booklet that answers these and many other questions in clear and concise language.

In addition to answering many of the most commonly asked questions concerning coronary heart disease, this new publication also provides a list of additional references covering such topics as proper diet, exercise, preventative care, and what to do after suffering a heart attack.

"Some Answers About Coronary Heart Disease" has been published as a community service by AHAF as part of the Foundation's Coronary Heart Disease Research program, which provides funding for heart disease research projects. It is available to the public at no cost. To obtain additional copies of this publication for groups or special events, write or call the American Health Assistance Foundation, 15825 Shady Grove Road, Suite 140, Rockville, MD 20850, 1-800-227-7998.

HEALTH CENTER PRESENTS "SELF AWARENESS PROGRAM"

The Education Department of the Regional Health Center in Wilmington is offering the popular "Self Awareness: Personal Discovery and Self-Concept," on July 11, 12, 13 (Tues., Wed., Thurs.) from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

Self Awareness is learning to understand what it is that makes a person unique. Self-concept, the image we have of ourselves, is our own creation. Learning to recognize and stick to personal needs and values is more than an interesting activity. This program will assist you in improving your own experiences with weight loss, exercise regimes, managing stress, assertiveness, personal safety and needed job changes. Good self-esteem is vital to a happy productive life. This workshop will help you to explore the origins of self-image. The group will also share information on improving our feelings about ourselves.

The program will be conducted by Susanne Trudeau, B.S., health educator, who has experience with a variety of courses, including stress management and assertiveness training. Susanne holds a bachelor's degree in psychology and health education from the University of Lowell.

Pre-registration is required as space is limited. Please call 508-657-3910, ext. 567 for registration. The fee is $30.

TRAVEL THE PACIFIC COAST BY BICYCLE

Wish you could jump on your bicycle and ride away without a care in the world? If the answer is yes, then the American Lung Association of Middlesex County (ALAMC) has planned the perfect vacation getaway for you this fall. All you need is a bike and a desire for adventure to be a part of the inaugural Pacific Coast Bicycle Trek, September 25 through October 20, from Seattle, Washington to San Diego, California.

More than 100 bicyclists from all across the country are registered and busy preparing for this exhilarating 26-day coastline adventure.

The American Lung Association goes the extra mile to insure a hassle-free, rewarding experience. "The trip includes breakfasts and dinners, accommodations, mobile bike shops, maps, transportation to carry personal gear, and all the staff and services required for long-distance bicycle trekking."

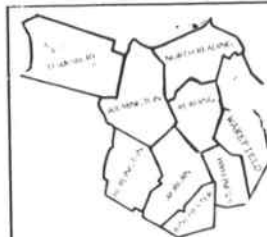

Ann-Marie Krol, Trek Coordinator for ALAMC, adding, "they even bring along a truck with hot showers."

A pledge-supported ride, the Pacific Coast Bicycle Trek is expected to raise over $1 million nationwide to support the fight against crippling lung diseases such as lung cancer, emphysema, chronic bronchitis and asthma.

To participate, each cyclist must raise a minimum of $5,000 in sponsor pledges through corporate and private donations before the trek leaves the Pacific Northwest. A lion's share of the funds will be returned to Lung Associations throughout the country to support local programs and services.

After leaving Seattle and cycling through Washington's rain forest on the Olympic Peninsula, cyclists will reach the wide, sandy shores of the Pacific. The Oregon coast will offer unmatched views of rugged cliffs and the crashing sounds of the ocean below. The route takes cyclist on a winding course, interrupted by dozens of rivers, streams and sleepy fishing villages along the way.

To find out more about the Pacific Coast Bicycle Trek, contact Ann-Marie Krol at (617) 272-2866.

School notes

by phyllis nissen

Woburn ambulances, fire engines and police units recently converged on the Joyce Middle School there for a surprise disaster drill aimed at evaluating the City's ability to respond to a real disaster situation.

The drill also tested local paramedics, emergency medical technicians and hospital staff.

According to Woburn Superintendent of Schools Paul Andrews, the drill's premise was that an unidentified gas or toxic fumes leak had affected six students and one teacher.

Role-play and tags describing degrees of injury were integral to the drill which required the emergency crews to use "triage," a priority system determining who should be put into ambulances first and rushed to Choate and Winchester hospitals.

A lunchbox instead of an infinite stream of lunch bags; composting; newspaper recycling; Dr. Seuss; wax paper; and Burger King: "I've been really into the environment," says 10-year-old Marissa Freitas, recently honored by the Reading Conservation Commission with an Audubon Society book because of her work toward a better environment.

That work included letters to the EPA and local merchants, urging the latter - such as Atlantic supermarkets - to use paper bags instead of plastic - which they now do. Discovering that styrofoam is more of a problem than other plastics, Freitas even suggested McDonald's raise its environmental consciousness.

World Science Fiction Convention in Boston

From H.G. Wells to Albert Einstein, and from "Star Wars" the movie to "Star Wars" the defense system, both science fact and science fiction will be highlighted at the 47th World Science Fiction Convention, Noreason Three, in Boston, Aug. 30 through Sept. 4.

The convention is the 50th anniversary World Science Fiction Convention.

The professional Guests of Honor this year are Andre Norton, noted author of over 50 science fiction and fantasy books, and Ian and Betty Ballantine, who founded paperback book publishing in the United States.

The convention features the selection of 1989 Hugo Award winners - those novels, stories, publishers, magazines, and films which are thought to be outstanding examples of quality science fiction or science fact.

One special feature of the 1989 World Science Fiction Convention is a 50-year

She also studied Reading's trash situation, consumer habits, and recycling - and using all her research, put together an environmental awareness day at her school.

The Burlington School Committee recently named retired Ipswich superintendent John Stella as Acting Superintendent of Schools while it continued its search for a new superintendent.

Said one School Committee member of the first difficult search: "The cleanest thing for us to do is the one I least wanted to do. We must go to an outside candidate."

Chosen from a field of 50 applicants including eight semifinalists and three finalists, 10-year Lynnfield Superintendent of Schools Dr. Sally Dias has accepted the position of superintendent of Watertown's five schools and 2,700 students - going from a $67,553 yearly salary to $75,500.

Dias holds degrees in physics and mathematics and a doctorate in education. She has taught physics at the junior high and high school levels and is now teaching it at the college level. She has also worked for the state Department of Education and has six children.

Lynnfield School Committee member Helene Naimon wishes Dias "peace, tranquility and happiness" in her new job ... "because she deserves it."

"I think she's a terrific educational leader," says Watertown School Committee Chair Maureen Loukas. "She brings wonderful management skills and, frankly, a good sense of humor."

The convention will offer a full range of science fiction-related film viewing, including screenings of the Hugo-nominated films: "Big," "Alien Nation," "Who Framed Roger Rabbit," "Willow," and "Beetlejuice."

Specialty acts, including magicians, singers, musicians, and artists will entertain passers-by at the Hynes.

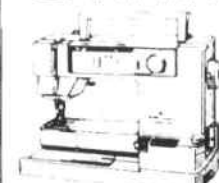

The World Science Fiction Convention also features a large art show and auction, where cover art form genre books and unusual sculptures, oils, acrylics, and pastels may be viewed and auctioned.

Since Noreason Three is a family convention, babysitting services and entertainment for young people are also important parts of the convention services.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

You would never have known that shooting off fireworks was illegal in my neighborhood. There were more barrages of fireworks this past fourth of July than any other year that I can recall. Business was really "booming" in the sale of "Blockbusters," "Rockets," and even the mild but potentially dangerous "Sparklers" were everywhere. Rockets zoomed sky-high almost as high as their price. I'm glad the fourth of July holiday is over. My dog will hopefully come out from under the bed any day now and I can take the cotton out of my ears. Victor DePippo said, "why the heck are you complaining, where's your Spirit of 76?" Then Victor added, "if dynamite were brains, you wouldn't have enough to blow your nose!" Thanks Victor. My flag was flying high and proud on the fourth of July, I read the preamble to the Constitution of the United States at the VFW ceremonies and later visited some disabled veterans who helped preserve the freedom that we enjoy.

If ever a marriage was made in Heaven, it was the joining of Chucky Brandano and the beautiful Diane Pezzuzzi (two of my personal friends) in the Holy Bonds of Matrimony. I have known each of them, long before they knew each other. I am proud that they were both two of my first "Personality Winners."

Kathy tells anybody who has an hour to lose, that our wedding was for "Better or Worse." I couldn't have done any better and she couldn't have done any worse! At my wedding an usher wanting to seat a woman (who was late) properly asked, "Ma'am are you a friend of the groom?" "I should say not," she adamantly exclaimed, "I'm the bride's mother!" Kathy puts so much cold cream and oil at night, she slides out of bed every morning. Yesterday, with curlers in her hair, cold cream on her face and wearing an old house coat, she picked up a wastebasket and ran out just as the rubbish collection truck was about to move away. "Am I too late for the rubbish?" she shouted. The foreman took one look at her and said, "no ma'am, jump in!"

Dennis Tully told me, "Woodchipper, my family enjoys writing, but they're not very successful. My dad writes poems nobody read, my mom writes song nobody will sing, and they both write checks nobody will cash. MDC Officer Bob Giguere arrived late for morning roll call once too often. The station captain called him in his office and said, "Instead of waiting twenty years to give you a gold watch, the commissioner recommends giving you an alarm clock, NOW! It takes a child two years to learn how to talk and a man 50 years to learn how to keep his mouth shut. Three cardinal rules to have your natural teeth a long time, "Brush your teeth every day, see your dentist twice a year and the most important of the three, mind your business!"

I know why there are so many turnovers in bakeries, everyone in the Italian bread dept. (where I worked years ago) was fired for "loafing." The boss had a lot of "crust" to do that right after "raisin bread" twenty-five cents and pumpnickel went up a dime. (While I'm on a "roll") Two "pretzel-benders" were tied up in "knots" when they heard the boss was going to "straighten" out their section. Kevin Fisher, Jackie Griffin and Bob Parsons worked part-time in the "cop-cakes" dept. Joe Ravidia, Frank Gioia, Jim Rataj and Bobby Belmonte were in the pastry division and they formed a "Bakery Shop Quartet." They called themselves "The Coconut Squares." They sounded better when the bases were "loaded," and the other two were "half-baked." A sign in the bakery window reads, "As you wander down the road of life, whatever be your goal. Keep your eye upon the donut and not upon the hole!"

Ladies, hear no evil, see no evil, and speak no evil, and you can rest assured that Kathy will never invite you to an afternoon tea again. Sign on a nudist colony gate, "This is the Dawn of a Nude day." When Blackie Vega was a young man, he was turned down for the West Point Academy "Too Short." So, he got a job with the fire department painting hydrants. Blackie had to give the job up when he fell off the step-ladder. His next job was painting the white line down the middle of the road for the Public Works Dept. The first day he painted a line almost a mile long. The second day he painted a line only 50 feet long. "What happened?" his boss

Skippy Giovanni asked. "Well," explained Blackie Vega, "that's the best I could do, after all the paint bucket kept getting further and further away!"

My Uncle Danny is a master electrician. He is "currently" in "charge" of a "high-wire" job "transforming" Washington "DC" to Washington "AC." I hope it doesn't end up being a "shocking" experience. He drank a little too much, one weekend and the judge ordered him to spend the night in a "dry-cell." He's a real "live-wire." He comes home every night and asks his wife Betty "watts new?" She comes right back with, "New York, New Hampshire and New Jersey!"

Woodchips Personality Winners, Robert M. Turosz, (Robert if the new Editor of the North Reading Transcript, Woodchips congratulates you), Lt. Edward Nolan, Tony Morlani, John Nicosia, Karl Berg, Tom Romeo, Bill Warnock, David Pebler, Millie

Miller, Pastor Barbara Cann, Judith Parsons, Gail Govoni, Janet Glavin and Holly Spusta all of North Reading. Also Dr. I Janice Copp Burns, Cathy Pacini, Henry Dembowski, Sharon Kelley, Betty Downs, Jean Purtell, Christine Tighe, and Lynn Duden all of Wilmington. Also Russell Millett, Robert Melillo, James Sullivan and Leo Boisinault, Donald Harris, Robert Neal, Tom and Carrie Mooney and Joseph DeCoste all of Woburn. DANIEL LaRUSSO (Ralph Macchio, r.) and Mr. Miyagi (Noriyuki "Pat" Morita) face their most important challenge yet in Columbia Pictures "The Karate Kid Part III," a Jerry Weintraub Production of a John G. Avildsen Film. John G. Avildsen directed the film from a script by Robert Mark Kamen. Jerry Weintraub is the producer. Karen Trudy Rosenfelt is the co-producer, and Sheldon Schragar is the executive producer.

Short Takes

The Karate Kid, Part III takes a cliché and hammers it to death. Not a pretty sight. Ralph Macchio, looking puffy and too old for the role, tells us once again that karate is spiritual, that it should be used to defend honor, not trophies. Too bad Hollywood didn't learn the same lesson, as they throw tea bag philosophy at us in the guise of meaningful entertainment, all the while hoping to add jingle to the box office. But we've seen this same story twice already, and remember, it wasn't that great before. Rated PG.

Great Balls of Fire is two hours of great rock-n-roll, complete with a pumpin' soundtrack recorded by the Killer himself. But don't mistake it for a biography of Jerry Lee Lewis, as this cartoony musical is more about the music, not the man. It does offer up a stupendous performance by Winona Ryder as a confused 13-year-old playing grown-up games with her 21-year-old husband, Jerry Lee Lewis. Dennis Quaid is charismatic as the rocker, but his performance is a bit over the top and his Louisiana drawl makes him sound suspiciously like Deputy Dawg. Sugar-coated direction and a campy plot just can't tie all those toe tappin' songs together, but still, it's not an unlikeable movie, just shallow. Rated PG-13.

Do the Right Thing is writer/director/actor Spike Lee's best, and most controversial, film to date. He's turned out a brilliant, energetic, sizzling story that is funny, sexy, strongly political and erupts when you least expect it. Set in a predominantly black New York neighborhood on a scorchingly hot day, Lee takes a stand against racial violence, murder in fact, by matching one intolerable act with another. If nothing else, this explosive, unexpected ending will leave you with something to think about and argue over, as Lee gives us many problems to ponder as the film winds down. Rated R. ½

Weekend at Bernie's

Weekend at Bernie's Starring Jonathan Silverman, Andrew McCarthy, Catherine Mary Stewart, Terry Kiser. Directed by Ted Kotcheff. Produced by Victor Drai. Written by Robert Klane. Rated PG-13. Opened Wednesday, July 5.

It is, essentially, a remake, or at least an update, of Alfred Hitchcock's The Trouble with Harry, and it is basically just a one-note joke. But Weekend at Bernie's remains an entertaining, fluffy little flick, just as long as you realize that it's a movie, not cinema, you're paying to see. Not that the ad campaign would lead anyone to believe that this was high art anyway.

The plot is very, very basic. Jonathan Silverman plays an enterprising, ambitious drone at an insurance company who thinks he's found a way up the corporate ladder when he and a buddy spot a major mistake in an account that could save the company several million dollars. When the two men are invited by their boss, Bernie, to his weekend getaway, they assume it is a gesture of gratitude.

Andrew McCarthy plays Silverman's screwy friend who is basically forced along for the ride, not having all that much impetus to get ahead on his own. There isn't much to these guys that you can't spot immediately. Silverman's character is the nebbish, the guy who wears his office clothes like a uniform, even donning them for extra weekend work. He still lives at home with his folks and loses his cool around pretty women. McCarthy is the Oscar Madison of this odd couple. He looks like a bum, has a cavalier attitude about work, and takes a carefree stance on life in general.

That's about all you ever find out about these two. Ditto for Catherine Mary Stewart, who seems to be around just to decorate the scenery. But as this is not the kind of movie oozing depth on several levels, it doesn't seem to matter that we don't know what makes these people tick, especially when you consider that the star is a corpse.

Terry Kiser plays Bernie, the corrupt boss who invites these two for a weekend at his sumptuous home in the Hamptons, Long Island. Kiser gets knocked off before the weekend really gets rockin'. The joke is that no one notices. Unlike The Trouble with Harry, in which the corpse wouldn't stay buried, here his neighbors are so self-absorbed they can't even tell that Bernie is more out of it than usual.

Well, there you have the whole movie. Oh, there is a smallish subplot about Silverman's romance with Stewart, and an even smaller subplot concerning the wise guys Bernie had been hooked up with in the first place, thus explaining his wish to hide the embezzlement uncovered by his two eager employees.

As it stands, it really doesn't sound like there is much to this flick, but the irreverent jokes involving Bernie are a hoot, even if the writers conveniently ignore the fact that Bernie never develops rigor mortis. There is Bernie propped up at a party, Bernie sitting on the deck beside a cool drink and a Monopoly game, Bernie used as a raft when Silverman and McCarthy run out of gas at sea. True, all of this would have been better served in a stinging skit on Saturday Night Live, when that show still packed a punch. But those in quest of light summer fare that requires absolutely nothing, not even the need to think, will be well served by Weekend at Bernie's.

Batman almost lives up to the enormous hype preceding its arrival, as this is one cool summer movie. Director Tim Burton gives us a dark, brooding, brutal, caped crusader who is up against a wily lunatic out to kill the inhabitants of Gotham City. Unfortunately, the film concentrates more on Jack Nicholson's Joker than Michael Keaton's Batman, leaving us without a clue as to what makes the bat guy tick. Still, the visuals in this film are mesmerizing, from the retro-modern details of Gotham to the shiny perkiness of Vicki Vale. Rated PG-13.  1/2

Honey, I Shrunk the Kids is a really cute movie that is about as memorable as a Cheerios commercial. Still, it's fun while it lasts. Rick Moranis plays a nerdy scientist whose at-home tinkering produces a machine that reduces his, and the neighbors' children to the size of microchips. To get help, the kids must cross their backyard, now as menacing as an uncharted jungle. If you are eight years old, this is a must-see film helped by the fact that it's shown with a new Roger Rabbit short, Tummy Trouble. Rated PG. **

Rainbow is an appealing adaptation of D.H. Lawrence's book as seen through the eyes of director Ken Russell that is as lovely as it is accessible. It is greatly empowered by Sammy Davis' strong portrayal of an independent spirit trying to survive the confines of English society around the time of World War I. A personal odyssey of who this young woman is, spiritually, sexually and politically, it could easily have been set in the present. Rated R. ***

Ghostbusters II is just a rehash of the movie we saw five years ago — not as much fun, but still entertaining. Bill Murray provides most of the laughs in this familiar story of good versus really bad. The ghost guys must combat tons of oozing pink slime as they save the Big Apple from bad karma. Rated PG. **

College grads job hunting

College commencement season will propel thousands of college graduates into a highly competitive job market next month, with degrees in every discipline but the most practical one — job hunting.

"Many students will forfeit valuable job opportunities because they don't understand how to conduct an employment search or 'self-marketing' campaign," claims J. Paul Costello, chairman of Costello & Company, Inc. of Westwood, Mass., human resource management consultants. "Don't overestimate the importance of a starting salary," cautions Costello, citing a common faux pas among newcomers to the job market. Instead, he recommends considering four criteria in this order: your new boss, the industry, the company, and finally, the salary.

To help college graduates launch a successful job hunt, Costello offers some practical advice based on experience with client companies where Costello & Company consultants are currently interviewing and hiring employees including this year's grads.

—Start Early. If you haven't begun job hunting by now, you're late, say the experts. They also discourage the idea of "taking the summer off."

—Study Yourself. Too many young candidates arrive for a job interview without the benefit of serious self-evaluation to determine specific objectives and how they want to apply newly acquired skills.

—Research Prospective Employers. There nothing more self-defeating in an interview than lack of knowledge about a prospective employer. Annual reports, recruiting brochures and other promotional material are usually readily available, and it only takes a quick phone call.

sprays, if not needed, may wipe out beneficial insects).

4. Avoid spraying crops in bloom, to protect honeybees. If spraying is necessary, do so in early morning or early evening.

5. Avoid spraying when the drift may contaminate non-target crops on adjacent areas.

6. Most importantly, read and heed the label on the pesticide container.

The most successful insect control strategies are based on —Contribute to the Interview. Ask intelligent questions and avoid one-word answers. Be ready to discuss the company as well as your college career. Spark the recruiter's interest.

—Present Yourself Well on Paper. Resume, cover letters and other correspondence are an employer's introduction to you, and to hundreds of other job seekers as well. To distinguish yourself from the competition, invest the time and effort in conveying a clear, concise description of your education, employment experience and achievements. This is not the time to be creative or unorthodox, according to Costello & Company. Hiring personnel are looking for a straightforward presentation of your background.

—Capitalize on Credentials. Employers are impressed with energy and initiative. Costello & Company recruiters say they look for candidates with a proven "work ethic," and they encourage students to emphasize previous experience that applies to a prospective employer's job opening. Prime examples include entrepreneurial students who may have launched their own summer business or motivated scholars who generated part-time income through special talents such as software expertise or mechanical ability.

—Seize Interview Opportunities. Corporate interviews on campus are ideal for gaining exposure to many companies and for refining your interviewing techniques.

"Using these tips will put you several steps ahead of other young candidates who haven't done their homework," promises Paul Costello. "And improving your grades in job-hunting will give you the most rewarding report card of all: a job offer."

Ladies, try not to be the first one to leave an afternoon tea, a garden club meeting or a social event. You may very well be the target of a conversation by some sweet young or older women who will make "Jack the Ripper," sound like a "Choir Boy!" The following bumper sticker tells it all, "I owe, I owe, So off to work I go!" A Chronicle reporter was interviewing a local centenarian. "The secret for a long life," the old timer said, "is to drink a lot of water before retiring at night. Then you have to wake up early the next morning!" During the war years help was hard to get. The owner of a Woburn restaurant desperately needed a dishwasher so he put this ad in the Daily Times Chronicle, "Woman wanted to wash dishes. Will marry if necessary!" A day without a call or visit from my Aunt Nora from Wilmington is like a picnic without ants. Super stars of the week are, Lorraine Fantasia, Jane Powers, Danielle Fulgni, Cheryl DeFlumeri, Kim Burke, Tina Woodland, Phyllis Warren and Christine Simpson all of Stoneham.

Bounty from S-3

18-century artifacts such as weather-worn sea chests, pewter tableware, barrels, hammocks, and sailors' belongings. Penny-whistlers, sea chanty singers, sword fighters, and maritime storytellers also provide period entertainment for visitors.

In addition to public tours, the ship will be the site for several private parties, including a July 14 benefit for the Commonwealth Literacy Campaign, sponsored by Long John Silver's Seafood Shoppes.

TBS is billing this year's voyage as the "HMS Bounty Maritime Movie Tour" to celebrate the ship's involvement in movie-making. Immediately before the tour began, the Bounty was in Jamaica for filming of a new Turner Network Television (TNT) version of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island," starring Charlton Heston, that is scheduled to air on the network next year.

This is the first opportunity for most Americans and Canadians to see the three-masted armed merchantman ship since its American and European tour more than 25 years ago.

The Bounty is accurate in its towering, 100-foot main mast and 10,000 square feet of canvas sails. Nine cannon, two anchors and twin gangplanks are also featured on the brightly-painted ship.

Admission to the Bounty is $3 for adults and $1.50 for children. Tours begin at 11 a.m. and end at 5:30 p.m.; tickets are available at dockside. The tour is not wheel-chair accessible.

-An Arts & Entertainment Update-

Kids Create Exhibit About Friendship

The JFK Library Corps, a public service program for local middle and high school students, currently has a special photographic exhibit on display at the John F. Kennedy Library and Museum. The exhibit, "Friendship," features twenty-eight 20 by 24 Polaroid photographs by Cambridge photographer, Elsa Dorfman.

The photographs feature Corps members ages 11 to 18 with friends they have made while participating in Corps projects, including area senior citizens with whom they work. Accompanying each photograph is narrative written by those in the photo about their friendships.

"Friendship" will be on display in the Library's Changing Exhibit Room through September 1989. The exhibit is free with regular admission to the Kennedy Library. Children under 16 are admitted free.

For more information about community service opportunities for kids ages 11 to 19, contact the JFK Library Corps at 617-436-9986.

A Tea Tax Town Meeting

A Tea Tax Town Meeting will be held every Saturday during July and August at 2 p.m. outside at the Boston Five Plaza directly in front of The Old South Meeting House. Admission is free.

Costumed interpreters from The Old South Meeting House and the Boston National Historical Park will lead visitors in a short re-enactment of a colonial town meeting of 1773 where the burning question of the day was, "What are we to do about that worst of plagues, the tea shipped by the East India Company?"

Carol Siskind Headlines Catch A Rising Star

Carol Siskind, whose appearance last winter at Catch A Rising Star in Cambridge prompted one critic to say, "They don't make comics much better than this," returns to the Harvard Square comedy room for a week-long engagement through July 15. Joining her on the bill for the week are Barry Neikrug and Thom Brown.

An Ivy League psychology graduate, Carol Siskind spends her time asking many of the most penetrating questions of her time. "Cottage cheese? Who invented it? And how did they know when they were done?" Like many of her colleagues on the comedy scene, though, she also talks a lot about relationships. "I'd really like to fall in love again. I'd like to meet someone very special. Someone wonderful. Someone I could seriously take for granted. Someone I could look at in the morning and say, 'You're not what I had in mind.'"

Carol is a frequent guest on "Late Night with David Letterman," with numerous appearances on HBO and Showtime specials, and she is a two-time nominee for an American Comedy Award as Best Female Comic.

Tanglewood Friends Offer Pre- and Post-Concert Dining

The manor house on the 125-acre Highwood estate, which was acquired last year by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., has been redecorated and named "The Highwood Club." As part of a benefits package for contributors to the Tanglewood Annual Fund, the Highwood Club will be open for pre-concert buffet dining and full bar service on Friday and Saturday evenings and post-concert refreshments every concert evening. An elegant Sunday brunch buffet will also be served. In addition, the manor house is available to contributors for private use for small dinners.

A three-minute walk from the Koussevitzky Music Shed, the manor house boasts a spectacular view of the Stockbridge Bowl and its own private parking area. Membership in the Highwood Club is available to Friends of Tanglewood for a minimum contribution of $500 and to Business Friends of Tanglewood for a minimum contribution of $650.

For further information, please contact the Tanglewood Friends Office at (413) 637-1600.

QUILTS FEATURED IN MUSEUM SHOW

Quilt treasures from the collections of Massachusetts Historical Societies and museums will be on exhibit in two shows at the New England Quilt Museum in Lowell, July 12 through September 17.

Stephanie Hatch of Boxford, and Patricia Nelson of Wolfeboro, NH, are curators of the shows. They were aided in the selection process by Sandra Munsey of Medfield and Connie Sprong of North Hampton.

Massachusetts quilts in the first show, "Through Attic Windows, Part I," July 12 through August 13, will be a Mariner's Compass quilt and a Four Patch crib quilt from the Boxford Historical Society; a Variable Star quilt and a Mosaic Star quilt from the Haverhill Historical Society; and a Diamond Nine-Patch signature quilt from the North Andover Historical Society.

Featured in the second show, "Through Attic Windows, Part II," August 15 through September 17, will be a Kate Greenaway Style quilt from the Medfield Historical Society; a Virginia Reel quilt, a Wild Goose Chase quilt, a quilted bonnet, and dolls quilts and beds from the Haverhill Historical Society; and an Ocean Waves quilt and Victorian doll furniture from the Boxford Historical Society.

Also on exhibit will be four original stained glass works using traditional quilt motifs made by Diana McGuire of the Peace River Stained Glass Company, Keene, NH.

Special events during the shows will include story hours for children, programs on antique thimbles and researching family quilts, gallery talks, and special showings of quilts with religious themes, antique flower quilts, and a collection of alphabet quilts. All events are included free with the usual museum admission fee. For further information, call the museum staff at (508) 452-4207.

HANDEL & HAYDN SOCIETY'S SUMMER SERIES

Handel & Haydn Society's new summer series will include three period instrument concerts at Boston's air-conditioned Tremont Temple, 88 Tremont Street. All of the concerts will be held on Tuesday evenings and will begin at 7 p.m.

The Handel & Haydn Society, which uses period and modern instruments, currently offers a series of concerts at Symphony Hall and a series of chamber concerts at smaller venues. H&H is hoping that the new series will enhance the Boston summer music scene and will provide greater opportunities for members of the H&H orchestra to perform more period instrument concerts.

The first concert will be held on Tuesday, July 18 and will feature the works of Johann Sebastian Bach.

Subscription price for Handel & Haydn Society's new summer series is $30 for all three concerts. Subscriptions can be purchased by calling H&H at 266-3605 or in person at the H&H box office, 295 Huntington Ave., Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Single tickets will be $15 and can be purchased three weeks before each performance through Ticketron Phone Charge at (617) 720-3434 or in person at the H&H box office. Single tickets will also be on sale at the door.

H&H summer series ticket holders can present their ticket stubs on concert nights at the following fine dining establishment to receive special discounts: Omni Parker House, Maison Robert, Cornucopia and Cafe Marliave.

YOUR OWN WATER

Hot Dry Summer Ahead

Remember how hot it was last summer. How dry your lawn became. If you're hooked up to a municipal water supply, you can expect to have to curtail your use of water this year... but not if you have your own source of unlimited water on your own property... wash the car all you want; the lawn will get plenty of water to stay green all summer; the swimming pool will be full and fresh all summer. These are just a few of the many benefits you'll receive when you have your on-sight well installed on your property by Avellino General Contractors. We'll install a modern, high-tech well in your own back yard and at a price that will surprise you. There's water to use right under your property... so take advantage of it now by calling Avellino General Contractors at 617-944-5454, before water restrictions leave you out to dry.
